THE BATTLES IN THE VALLEY.

THE FIGHT ON JAMES ISLAND.

From the Charleston Mercury, June 17.

A little before noon yesterday, our city was thrown into a state of feverish excitement by the vague tidings that there had been bloody work at Secessionville, on James Island. From the first the news was of an encouraging character, inasmuch as we were assured that a mere handful of our brave troops had repulsed a heavy column of the enemy, thrown forward to assault the battery at Secessionville, manned by a portion of Col. LAMAR's Regiment of Artillery, South Carolina Volunteers. From the various accounts which we have received, we have collated the following facts in relation to the battle:

About dawn yesterday morning our pickets in front of LAMAR's Battery were driven in, and almost simultaneously the enemy's column was seen some four hundred yards off, advancing with the bayonet, at double quick, to the assault. Our troops within the battery had been hard at work the evening before, in throwing up another battery, and were almost worn out with fatigue. The first round that was fired at the Yankees was by Col. T. G. LAMAR himself. His men hastened with alacrity to their pieces, and were soon pouring grape and canister against the rapidly approaching enemy. At each discharge great gaps were visible in the Yankee ranks, but still they came on, without firing a single volley. It was afterwards ascertained that their muskets were empty, and that they had actually hoped to carry the battery with the bayonet alone, but the rapid and fearful cannonade and fusilade kept up against them was too severe for their nerves, and when close to our intrenchments they wavered, recoiled and finally fled in disorder.

But a very short time elapsed before the enemy's column, reinforced by infantry and artillery, reformed, and again came forward. This time they did not disdain the use of cartridges, but poured heavy volleys against our battery as they advanced. But again the terrible discharges of grape and canister mowed down the approaching line; and, notwithstanding the remonstrances of their officers, again the Yankees broke and restreated pell-mell from the field. A third time the enemy formed his line, and advanced in a last desperate effort to gain the battery, but again in vain. The assailants had reached the ditch, and some of them succeeded in mounting the embankment, but they paid for their rashness with their lives, and their comrades behind, taking warning from their fate, fled once more—this time not to be rallied to a direct charge. Our men all bear witness to the obstinate bravery of the enemy on this occasion.

Between the charges which proved so disastrous to the Yankees, a galling fire was kept up against our battery from three gunboats in the creek, about 1,700 yards east of our position. A cross-fire was also steadily maintained against us from the land batteries which the enemy had erected—one on the edge of the wood in which the fight with the Forty-seventh Georgia Regiment occurred last week, and another between that point and the position occupied by the gunboats. BEAUREGARD's famous field battery also took part in the engagement, being divided into two sections, which played upon different parts of our works.

It had now become evident to the enemy that the men who held our battery had no idea of yielding it, and the plan of attack from the front was given up.

Flanking bodies were thrown forward to assault our works from the direction of the marshes which skirted our battery on either side. On the east side of the battery the movement was speedily frustrated, and the few bold men who ventured close enough to pour their fire into the post soon fell. No less than seventeen were killed outside the ditch, and one who had mounted the parapet fell on the top, pierced by eight balls.

On the west side of the battery the attack was more serious. The famous New-York Seventy-ninth Regiment took up a position so as to enfilade our guns, and kept up a constant and effective fire of musketry to drive off our gunners. They were met by the Charleston battalion and the Eutaw Regiment. For a time the fight was desperate, but the Louisiana battalion, under Lieut.-Col. MCHENRY, came up at the critical moment in gallant style, and the repulse of the Highlanders was no longer doubtful. The enemy was, for the last time, forced back with great slaughter, and the day was won.

The list of casualties is given by the Mercury. Among them is the name of Col. LAMAR, of the battery, who was wounded, but continued to fight with his guns. Capt. SAMUEL J. REID, Lieut. HUNBERT, Lieut. J. J. EDWARDS and Lieut. R. W. GREEN are among the officers killed, and Capt. H. C. KING was mortally wounded.

Our total loss, as nearly as we can ascertain, was about 40 killed and 100 wounded. The enemy's was far heavier. We buried yesterday 140 dead Yankees left upon the field. We say Yankees, using the designation as one common to the whole army of invaders, but in truth, the men who did the fighting against us yesterday were nearly all Europeans, and in the lineaments of the dead the Scottish type was markedly predominant. We captured 70 prisoners. As for the number of the enemy wounded, no correct estimate can be made. Glad to get rid of the unwelcome task of caring for the maimed vandals, our men suffered the enemy's ambulances to approach within point blank range of their guns, and to carry off the wounded, who must have numbered 300 at least.

A LATER ACCOUNT.

From the Charleston Mercury, June 18.

Secessionville is a small village, the Summer retreat of a few of the James Island planters. It is on the eastern side of the island, on a high plot of land lying on a bold creek, which winds through the marshes between James', or Morris' (or Solly) Island, and empties into the Stono River, near its mouth. This creek runs immediately up to Secessionville. On the west of the village, a short shallow creek makes its way toward the waters of Charleston Bay. Thus a league of land is formed between the two creeks. It is connected with the body of the land by a narrow neck of thirty yards width, some four or five hundred yards south of Secessionville. Here LAMAR's Battery is located across the high land, and flanked on each side by marsh and the creeks. It is a simple earthwork, heavily constructed, having a plain face, with an obtuse angle at each side. It faces south, in the direction of Battery Island, LEGARE's, RYAN's and GRIMBALL's plantations, on the Stono River, which is about two miles off. From this point the cleared high land stretches out toward the Stono River, like the top of a funnel, for the distance of near a mile, interrupted only by the division lines between fields, hedges and ditches. These fields are covered with woods three feet high. The edges of the high land and marsh are skirted with brushwood and sea myrtles. In the background are patches of wood between these fields and the Stono. On the borders of these woods three batteries of the enemy are located; and besides these land batteries, the gunboats, approaching by way of the Secessionville Creek, can open fire as they please. For the last fortnight, a fight at long taw has been going on, at intervals, between the Secessionville Battery and the guns of the enemy, and our artillerymen have been much fagged by their watching and exertions. They have done much to keep the foe in check.

On Sunday night, two companies, consisting of the Charleston Light Infantry, from the Charleston Battalion, under Capt. T. Y. SIMONS, and Company A, Capt. SWAMS, from SUMTER's Battalion, were thrown out half a mile in front of the work. The rest of the men of these two battalions of infantry, stationed at Secessionville to support the battery, were laboriously occupied during the night. The two companies of LAMAR's South Carolina Volunteer Artillery—REID's and KEITT's—were also engaged in labor until a half hour of dawn, when they were ordered by Col. LAMAR to take a nap. At break of day the pickets came running in just before the advancing foe. When Col. LAMAR was notified and looked out from the work he was to defend, the enemy had approached to within 400 yards. But 25 of the garrison were awake. It was a complete surprise, and nothing but the nerve, promptitude and energy of the officers, especially the commanding officer, saved the battery from easy capture. The first round was fired when the column was within thirty paces of the guns. It was directed by Col. LAMAR himself. The shot burst through the closed ranks with great havoc, and the foe soon reeled. The wearied men, startled by the sound, or aroused by shakes or bayonet punches from their officers, sprang to their guns. The two infantry battalions rushed to their quarters for their weapons, formed under their officers, and came to the assistance of the gunners. Three land batteries, two sections of field artillery, and three gunboats began to open upon the work.

The second charge of the enemy was made and repulsed with slaughter. And again the third. The animated fire from our riflemen, cooperating with the deadly discharges of grape and canister, swept the field in front, and cut down the skirmishers, who, deploying on the left flank under cover of some bushes, had come up to the very work at that angle. In these successful efforts, which occurred at 5 o'clock in the morning, Col. LAMAR fell from the effect of a musket ball striking him through the lower part of the ear and running round the neck under the skin. By his good courage and energy, in the early part of the action, he did the preservation of the position, under circumstances of great peril, from the surprise. His brave example and personal efforts greatly inspired his command. After Col. LAMAR was wounded, he was unable to stand, from his great loss of blood, and was carried off as soon as practicable. His place in the battery was filled by that able, accomplished and indefatigable officer of the regular artillery, Lieut.-Col. P. H. WAGNER—being the next officer in rank present—as Col. GILLIARD had been stationed at the post with his battalion for some time, and had done good service. Col. WAGNER, who was only temporarily there, requested him to assume command, adding that he would aid him and take charge of the battery. This he did until the conclusion of the fight, between 8 and 9 o'clock, sustaining a terrible flank fire and directing the gunnery with great coolness and precision.

Upon failing to storm the work, or to flank it on the left or eastward side, the enemy drew off and came on on the right flank, on the other side of the small creek and north to the marsh. Here, at the short distance of about 350 yards, three regiments, deploying in line of battle, and partially covered by a small growth of underbrush, poured upon the gunners of the work, and upon the two batteries of infantry drawn up facing them across the marsh, a continuous and deadly fire. The gun-carriages were torn and perforated by many balls. Many of our men fell at the guns and along the line forward, to the rearward of the battery and its right flank. The contest was very unequal and trying. It raged for some time, but at this critical juncture, the Louisiana batteries came up gallantly at the double-quick, under its skillful officer, Lieut.-Col. MCHENRY. By the guidance of Maj. HUDSON, of SUMTER's Battalion, it formed on the right of that corps, facing the marsh. This reinforcement and its galling fire disheartened the foe. Capt. BOYCE, with one gun of light artillery, began to play on his rear. He began to fall back; fairly beaten off while the struggle was progressing, immediately on the rear right flank of the battery against these three regiments, a formidable force of the foe attempted, by passing further out to the West, to gain the rear of our position. But in skirting a wood they came upon the advancing lines of the Eutaw Regiment, Col. BRANSON, who had come two miles. Declaring they were friends—not to shoot—they came close up and fired into our men, killing many. But the response they got was cutting. The wood edge was strewn with dying and the dead. Thirty or forty bodies were picked up here. The movement was foiled. Nothing was left but retreat from every portion of the field.

It was a bloody fight, fought against odds, by exhausted men, without preparation. It was a signal victory of Southern patriots over the murderous invaders of their soil. The five regiments attacking are said to be the Seventy-ninth New-York Highlanders, the Eighth Michigan, one from Massachusetts, a New-Hampshire and Connecticut regiment. But for the distance of our troops and the brief time occupied in the action, together with obstructions in the road, preventing the passage of light artillery to the enemy's rear, their whole force may perhaps have been taken or cut up. From the account of prisoners, who assert that there were nine United States regiments out that morning, it is probable that four regiments were held in reserve to support the fire engaged, had to protect their retreat.

TELEGRAPHIC ACCOUNTS.

From the Petersburg Express.

AUGUSTA, June 17, 1862.

At 7 o'clock A. M. yesterday a fight commenced on James Island, four miles from Charleston, the enemy advancing with five regiments to the assault of our Secessionville battery with the bayonet. Col. T. G. LAMAR commanded the battery with a few hundred of our troops. He waited till the enemy approached within close range, when he opened with grape and musketry, literally mowing down the advancing Yankee columns. The enemy rallied and fled; but presently, being reinforced by artillery, again formed and charged, and were again repulsed with great slaughter.

A third time they advanced, endeavoring to flank our battery, but were again beaten back. We then advanced from our works in pursuit, killing and capturing many of the enemy. Our loss is twelve killed and twenty wounded.

Charleston troops were principally engaged.

The enemy's loss has not yet been definitely ascertained, but must have been several hundred in killed, wounded and prisoners. A batch of thirty prisoners have just been brought to this city.

SECOND DISPATCH.

AUGUSTA, Tuesday, June 17.

The battle of yesterday is pronounced by our Generals to have been most desperate. Our loss is heavier than at first reported, including several valuable company officers.

A portion of the enemy's force fought gallantly. The Seventy-ninth New-York (Highlanders) assault our battery with empty muskets, fought gallantly and retired, leaving fifty dead in the ditch. They succeeded in carrying off their wounded.

The enemy's gunboats and land batteries cooperated in the attack.

The loss of the enemy is about four hundred killed and wounded.

Our men were much wearied, having been exposed to shelling, night and day, for a week past, but they fought desperately.

Col. TORRE was slightly wounded in the neck. Capt. KING and Lieut. EDWARDS, of the Sumter Guards, and Capt. REID, of TANNER's Battalion, were killed.

It is expected that the attack will soon be renewed. Gen. EVANS complimented Col. LAMAR on the field.

THE CAMPAIGN IN VIRGINIA.

THE RIVER LINES.

The following intelligence is copied from the Petersburgh Express of June 20:

"We learn from a source entitled to the fullest credit, that Yankee troops, to the number of 6,000, have advanced from Norfolk and Suffolk to a point on the Seaboard Railroad, known as Franklin Depot, 50 miles from Portsmouth, and 36 from Weldon. The aim of this force is, beyond doubt, to advance to Weldon, and cut of railroad communication at that point with Petersburgh and Richmond. At Weldon, the railroads from Wilmington and Raleigh, and Petersburgh converge. It is an important position, and, of course, will be held by our forces at all hazards. We have no information as to the preparations to receive them, but believe that our authorities will see to it that they are ample. This explains the recent visit of BUCHANAN to Old Point, and the White House, on the Pamunkey, where he and MCCLELLAN compared notes."

THE LINES OPPOSING M'CLELLAN.

From the Richmond Dispatch, June 21.

The lines yesterday were more than usually animated, owing to the fact that our artillery at different points were replying to the salutes which Yankees, for the past few days, have been wont to favor us.

On the north bank of the Chickahominy, and in a direct line with GARNETT's house, the enemy have erected several batteries, which opened last week, causing much annoyance to our pickets and wagon camps, but not resulting in any mortality. On Monday another new battery was unmasked, which threw shells into the wagon-camp of the Eighteenth Mississippi Volunteers, (near GARNETT's farm,) causing locomotion, and doing some little damage—a shell fell and burst in a wagon that was being unloaded by the Commissary. Others were pitched with great accuracy among the tents, one of the pieces striking a soldier in the mouth, and knocking out his front teeth. Some fifteen shells fell in this camp on Monday, and others were thrown at regiments on picket concealed in thickets. To put an official stop to these kind attentions of the enemy, Capt. DANIEL's battery of heavy pieces was ordered up yesterday morning, and unexpectedly opening, quickly dismounted one of their guns, shelled them from their position, causing much haste and disorder among the Philistines, and drove them totally from the front. Their wagons and troops were seen hastily departing for safer and more comfortable quarters. Capt. DANIEL's shells followed them on the rout, and inflicted much loss. The precision of execution displayed yesterday by the battery, was matter of much admiration and praise—the Yankees were utterly at a loss to account for the opening of our heavy guns, and from the haste with which they vacated their newly-constructed works, (on which they appeared so much to depend,) it would seem that they retired in great disgust, and with no applause from the several Federal regiments supporting the batteries.

On the right of our position, also, the artillery were engaged yesterday, much to the discontent of the enemy's pickets and working parties in woods to the right of the railroad, and near to the left of the Williamsburgh road. It has often been a matter of speculation with us that our commanders have not, long ere this, given opportunities to our excellent artillerists to distinguish themselves along our lines. The Yankees have a strong penchant for artillery practice, and have much annoyed our various picket and wagon camps; yet, although causing no serious damage, it has often surprised us that some of PAMERON's and the Washington Artillery pieces have not been called into requisition, to reply to the attentions of the vandals in and across the swamp. It may be wise, perhaps, to conceal our strength, but when the enemy are daily detailing their best artillerists to annoy our position, why may not some of our veterans be called to the front to reply, if merely for the sake of practice? Our men are burning to distinguish themselves; they treat the foe with profound contempt, in any and every arm of the service. Why, then, restrain them longer, for they hourly exclaim, "Patience is stale, and we're tired of it."

The enemy, however, have not been idle; that battery which lies smugly in the woods to the left of the Williamsburgh road, (about one mile in the dense timber,) sometimes opens with terrific force upon our advanced posts, and causes some slight loss to us. Yesterday this hidden monster opened upon our pickets of forces and did some damage, for we are told that one of their shells exploded in the camp of the Ninth Virginia, killing five and wounding several others of that gallant corps. What effect our artillery had in reply we cannot learn, yet we are informed from deserters that the fire of our pieces is generally considered very destructive among the Yankees.

Deserters, as usual, are coming to our lines, and the stories told by them of the state of the Federal army is in no wise favorable to the ambition of Major-Gen. MCCLELLAN. One, who deserted from the Eleventh United States Infantry, informs us that their defeat and loss at Chickahominy gradually begins to be known among the men, and the majority feel in no hurry to attempt the capture of Richmond, for they are aware that the best blood of the South is ready to be shed in its defence; and as the deserter says: "The Southerners fight well at any time, but in support of their Capital we may well imagine how desperate the combat will prove, and have no urgent wish for the fight will commence. MCCLELLAN, however, thinks it impossible to take Richmond without destroying Drury's Bluff, and as the gunboats have no desire to make a second trial of that fatal experiment, Federal operations before your city may be of long continuance."

THE BATTLE NEAR PORT REPUBLIC.

From the Richmond Dispatch, June 21.

It seems to be generally admitted that this battle must be designated as the battle of "Cross Keys." The term, although derived from Yankee sources, seems to have been adopted by both parties. The subjoined account is from the Lynchburgh Virginian, received from an officer who participated in the engagement:

"The battle-ground is five miles from Port Republic. Gen. EWELL's Division fought this action, and chiefly by Brig.-Gen. TRIMBLE's Brigade on the right; which by skillful selection of his position, and judicious manœuvres, with 1,758 men, defeated in succession several charges, of the full brigades of the enemy, numbering over 6,000 men, and two batteries of artillery, killing and wounding of the enemy over 3,000, and with a loss in his own brigade of only 124 killed and wounded.

Perhaps no action during the war has exhibited such brilliant results, obtained by skill in manœuvring in field as well as hard fighting. Gen. TRIMBLE's theory seems to be the repeated and sudden assaults upon the enemy, and desperate fighting only when a great point can be gained.

No officer in the army has gained suddenly more distinction than Gen. TRIMBLE has done, by his quick perception and swift movements, showing the highest qualities to command.

After the battle, Gen. TRIMBLE, we understand, strongly counseled a night attack on FREMONT's whole army, urging its complete success, but, in view of the decision of Gen. Jackson to attack Gen. SHIELDS next day, the night attack was sanctioned not.

Events afterward fully showed that this night attack would have demolished Fremont's whole army, and captured all his artillery, as his army was broken down and demoralized to such a degree as to have made but little resistance.

Prisoners of FREMONT's army acknowledge 1,000 killed in battle, and near 4,000 in killed, wounded and missing. Large numbers of his men availed themselves of the chances of a battle to desert.

The famous Dutch "Bucktails," and Eighth New-York Dutch Regiment, BLENKER's men, were entirely demolished in this action—a just retribution for their excesses in the valley, by insults, abuse, robbery and destruction of property.

After the defeat of SHIELDS, on Monday, FREMONT retired rapidly down the valley, no doubt fearing a pursuit, and did not stop until he reached Mount Jackson, where he has halted, as if to make a stand. Jackson's army is resting, both men and horses, and taking care of the sick. What his next move will be no one KNOWS—something, Western, beyond the Ohio.

REPORTS FROM NORFOLK.

From the Richmond Dispatch, June 21.

We have advices from Norfolk up to Tuesday morning.

Wm. H. MOORE, a prominent merchant of Portsmouth, and an earnest Secessionist, was set upon by the blackguard Unionists or Lincolnites, last Monday afternoon, and so brutally beaten that his life is endangered.

Persons from Norfolk on Tuesday report everything quiet.

THE PRESIDENT AT WEST POINT.

His Arrival in this City, and Departure on a Special Train—Probable Consultation with Gen. Scott.

It was stated yesterday morning, on the authority of passengers from West Point, that President LINCOLN and Gen. POPE had arrived at COZZENS' Hotel at an early hour, and the fact that a special train passed over the Hudson River road after midnight left little reason to doubt the truth of the report. Subsequently, the following dispatch was received in this City, settling the fact that the President was indeed at West Point:

COZZENS' HOTEL, WEST POINT, June 24.

The President of the United States arrived at my hotel this morning, at 4 o'clock.

WM. B. COZZENS.

It appears that on the arrival of the President at Cortlandt-street wharf, in this City, a carriage, which was kept in readiness, conveyed him and his party to the depôt of the Hudson River Railroad, in Chambers-street. A special train had been provided, and left the depôt immediately. Arriving at GARRISON's, opposite West Point, a boat, which lay at the wharf with steam up, transferred the travelers across the Hudson, and they were at COZZENS' Hotel in one hour and twenty-five minutes from the time they reached the depôt in this City. It is stated that the arrangements were all made in advance by telegraph; and further, that Gen. SCOTT, who is at West Point, had been notified, and met the President immediately on his arrival.

In this City few persons were aware of the President's arrival. A considerable number saw him, but he was not generally recognized.

ARMY AND NAVY NEWS.

The new commander of the United States troops in and around Washington, Gen. SAMUEL D. STURGIS, is one of the finest disciplinarians in the army, and it is for this specialty he was probably appointed to his present position. He is a graduate of West Point, and after completing his studies at that institution, in 1840, was admitted to the rank of the Second Dragoons, as a Second Lieutenant, by brevet. His promotion was rapid. He became a First Lieutenant, Captain and Major successively, the last in May, 1861, since which time he has risen to be a Colonel and a "General," by brevet, of course. Gen. STURGIS is a native of Pennsylvania, and has never interfered in politics.

The arrival from the Gulf of the United States steam-frigate Colorado, at Boston, was announced yesterday by telegraph. She is to go to Portsmouth, N. H., for repairs. Annexed is a correct list of her officers:

Lieutenant Commanding, JOHN L. DAVIS; Lieutenant and Executive Officer, Robert Bord, Jr.; Chief Engineer, George Gideon; Paymaster, A. W. Russell; Captain of Marines, E. McD. Reynolds; Surgeon, Stewart Kennedy; Acting Masters, John Sherrill, James Taylor, Joseph W. Tuck, Tecumseh Steece; Assistant Surgeons, Adrian Hudson, J. Otis Burt; First Assistant Engineer, Lloyd A. Williams; Second Assistant Engineer, J. Cox Hull; Third Assistant Engineers, Albert Murray, L. L. Olmsted, Wm. S. Smith, Geo. H. White, Isaac R. McNair; Acting Midshipmen, F. J. Higginson, W. R. Bridgman; Paymaster's Clerks, Wm. H. Upham, J. Seward Pickett; Boatswain, Zachariah Whitemarsh; Gunner, James D. Boston; Carpenter, Geo. E. Anderson; Sailmaker, Joseph C. Bradford; Coast Pilot, Daniel Ponper; Acting Master's Mates, Nathaniel Hobbs, Moses W. Stone, Augustus Farwell, Alexander Cushman; Paymaster's Steward, Albert A. Harris; Surgeon's Steward, Jeremiah O'Neil.

The security of officers for service has necessitated the ordering of the above gentlemen to other duty already.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

A Flag of Truce to City Point—Female Secesh Gone Home—A Skirmish on James River.

FORTRESS MONROE, Monday, June 23, and BALTIMORE, Tuesday, June 24.

Surgeon A. OWEN SHELLS, of the Twenty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers, died in this General Hospital here last night. He arrived here in the Nellie Baker only yesterday afternoon from White House.

The steamer Fort Royal arrived at Norfolk this morning from Newbern. She brought no news.

The steamer Matamora will proceed to City Point to-morrow under a flag of truce, and convey thither a score of female Secessionists from Baltimore and Washington, besides several paroled rebel Surgeons and line officers.

The United States steam sloop-of-war Wachusett, arrived from City Point this morning, and reports that on Saturday last the steam gunboat Jacob Bell proceeded up the James River to reconnoitre, but when abreast of Turkey Island ran hard aground on a shifting sand-bar, which accident the rebels soon observed and took advantage of by bringing a battery of field pieces down on the south bank and opening upon the Jacob Bell from rifled guns with shell and solid shot. The gunboat did all she could to drive off the rebels, but did not succeed until she was considerably injured.

A new steamboat, called the John Tucker, arrived from New-York this morning, having made the run from wharf to wharf in 23 hours.

The steamer Empire City sailed for Port Royal this morning, having in tow five schooners for Hatteras Inlet.

The British steamer Jason dropped down from Norfolk this morning to prepare for a cruise.

The steamer George Peabody, from Hatteras for New-York, put in here this morning, with the loss of her starboard paddle-wheel by an accident.

INTERESTING FROM NORFOLK.

Slow Growth of the Loyal Sentiment—Gen. Viele's Policy—A Visit to Gosport Navy-Yard—Problems.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NORFOLK, Saturday, June 21, 1862.

Whatever change may be silently going on in favor of Union feeling in this community, I am sorry to say there is very little of it yet apparent on the surface. In fact, this city is more of a puzzle to-day than it was when our troops first took peaceable possession of it; and that sullen, stubborn, sedate and mistrustful air which I mentioned in my first letter, as meeting one everywhere, seems to be rather increasing than diminishing.

There is a great diversity of opinion as to the manner in mode treatment which Gen. VIELE is adopting toward the rebels—some good Union men condemning it severely, while others sustain it as the only mode of ever bringing about reconciliation. There is a great deal to be urged on both sides of this very critical question, and although, from sundry hitty symptoms, I am sometimes led to doubt whether Gen. VIELE may not ultimately find his leniency misplaced and abused, I confess that I have such an abiding faith in the inherent truth and righteousness of our cause, and in the power and contagion of kindness, that I, for one, give in my verdict—for the present at least—for a little longer trial of the suaviter principle.

The opposite sides of the question, now so earnestly agitating the people of Norfolk, may be briefly stated as follows: Gen. VIELE's method, if I understand it rightly, is to win the rebels over by kindness, not by force. He argues, very naturally, that a forced allegiance, if possible to obtain, is not worth possessing; and that as our fellow-countrymen of the South are endeavoring to leave us unreasonably, he will endeavor—by sheer kindness, and proofs of no aggressive spirit on our part—to win them back to its reasonableness. To do this most effectually, he spares no exertion to manifest his kindly attentions where they should be most sensitively felt by the manhood of the South, viz.: to the weaker sex, the children and aged, whom the rebels have left entirely under our protection.

That the Governor has fully succeeded in winning over this non-combatant but very important portion of society there can be no doubt whatever. Any one entering his room, during the hours of business, would think he was holding a perpetual levée,—such is the rush of crinoline upon him. While I was having the honor of a tête-à-tête with him, in they came by squads, unaccompanied by any gentlemen, until I found myself in the presence of no fewer than thirteen of the fair daughters of Virginia. Perhaps they were terrified at expecting to find in Gen. VIELE one of those horrid vandals and cut-throats that DAVIS and BEAUREGARD are always talking about, but if so, any such apprehensions were not noticeable in the killing manner with which they smiled and simpered, shook hands and whispered something—(in which "thanks," "kindness," &c., were quite audible)—to the courteous General.

Those who are opposed to the lenient policy, look upon this mish of things as favoring Gen. VIELE's personal popularity with the rebels, but in no wise calculated to develop a Union feeling among them, or to strengthen the hands of the Unionists. They assert that the very same parties who obtain these favors from the Governor, instead of being softened or drawn toward the Government, are actually hereby emboldened in their treason; that they look upon their influence over the kind-hearted General as a species of triumph, and that it is an every-day occurrence for some rude woman to insult our soldiers in the performance of their duties, and if the latter dare to say one word in self-justification, the invariable reply is: "I'll report you to Gen. VIELE." They argue from this that while such leniency does not make Unionists of disloyal people, it certainly tends to discourage those who are truly loyal.

I give no positive opinion of the relative merits of these two antagonistic ideas, but present you the case precisely as I find it. I have conversed with a great many intelligent rebels who persistently declare that they never will give an oath of allegiance, and all speak highly of Gen. VIELE and his administration. I have also conversed with Union men—Virginians—who are stanch supporters of Gov. PIERPONT, and are determined to go wherever he leads them. Some say that Gen. VIELE's kind system will prove an utter failure, others again say that it is the best course to pursue at present, and that reaction depends upon other influences altogether.

One very intelligent Virginian Unionist—an old resident of Norfolk—assured me that the only thing now keeping the Unionists in check is the pending uncertainty of the fate of Richmond. "Thousands among us," said he, "who would gladly avow their sentiments and embrace the old Union, dare not do so yet, because they dread the possibility of a return of the rebels. Look at how the Unionists were situated in the Valley of the Shenandoah. How do they know it may not be their fate here?"

Portsmouth is far more outspoken in its loyalty than Norfolk. I heard this before I went to the former place, and found it so. On the ferry-boat a group were assembled round some community in an illustrated paper, and laughing heartily. On joining them, I found it was one of FRANK LESLIE's old numbers of the Budget of Fun, just got here as a novelty, and containing FRANK BELLEW's ludicrous cut of "The Devil to pay up Salt River;" his sable majesty, in the shape of a steamboat nigger, ringing the bell for the "gemmen" to pay up, and the wretched secesh passengers feeling their pockets in vain. This looked pretty fair for such a latitude as this.

As I was about to enter the Gosport Navy-yard, two respectable working men accosted me and asked a light for their pipes. We fell into conversation, and I found them both Unionists of the first water. They seemed me that the whole working population of Portsmouth were Union to the core, and that they did not speak out yet, merely because the time had not come to do so safely. These two individuals, however, were not afraid; they had always proclaimed their opinions, had been persecuted for it, and, in proof, one drew from his pocket an old copy of the Portsmouth Transcript, of May, 1861, in which, in a published list of 760 proscribed Union names he proudly pointed to His own as the first. It was PETER G. TEUSER, cooper, and the other man's, name also down on the list, was G. W. PAPEN, tinner. They were consequently hunted from day to day—deprived of all employment, and had, at last, barely the means of keeping their families from downright starvation.

I record the names of these heroes, because it is upon such stalwart material that we must at last depend for rescuing our country from the aristocratic deluge that threatens it, under the false cry of Slavery. While the names of more splendid martyrs are blazoned upon the scroll of fame, many a humble workman like these is silently and uncontentiously enduring untold privations, and undergoing sufferings, in maintenance of his principles, that put him on a level with the noblest of patriots.

The destruction at the Gosport Navy-yard is altogether beyond the conception of any one who has not seen it. It causes a feeling of pain and bewilderment to wander over whole acres of these ruins of a nation's wealth and industry. Some idea of the vastness of the devastation may be had, when I tell you that I counted twenty-three different buildings, utterly ruined, with nothing but the bare, shattered walls and piers standing; many of those buildings being 400 and 500 feet long, by 70 or 80 feet wide! The heat was so intense that I found whole masses of slating melted and run together, like the metallic dross of an iron foundry. The only buildings left standing are a large new bakery and the iron foundry, and this was robbed of its appurtenances. The splendid Dry Dock is seriously damaged at the entrance, by being blown up with gunpowder.

We have had a number of street rows in this place and neighborhood, recently; indeed, they seem to be becoming of daily occurrence. One on Saturday at Portsmouth—three on Monday and Tuesday in Norfolk—and one on Wednesday in Suffolk, which may terminate fatally to one man—a rebel. They are all between Unionists and Secessionists. Mayor LAMB and his posse of policemen have never given their oath of allegiance, and, considering that rebels are not the proper persons to hold authority over Unionists, it really seems as if Gen. BUTLER's plan of managing this part of the business is the best. Upon one thing all Unionists here, with whom I have conversed, agree, and that is, that this city should be governed entirely by martial law.

The municipal election takes place next Tuesday, the 24th, at Norfolk. Some apprehend disturbance, but I am inclined to think matters will pass off quietly. There is some talk of letting the election go by default, but as this would interfere materially with many vested interests of the poor, it will probably take place. Should the Secessionists elect their man—(strange supposition for a rebel town we have just conquered!) it will matter little, for when the proper time arrives, everything will be settled by Gov. PIERPONT in the Wheeling convention, and if elected he will be appointed an Ambassador. The election is therefore, at best, a temporary farce.

By the way—here is a little item expressly for the ladies. Can any of your fair readers explain why the ladies of Virginia have either such remarkably small or remarkably large feet? A shoedealer here assures me that he can only sell sizes of Nos. 1½, 2 and 3, or Nos. 6, 7 and 8; the ones fit only for fairies, the others for elephants. But the military band is just beginning to give the rebels "Hail Columbia" close to my window, so I must stop.

The Royal Mail steamship Arabia, from Liverpool at 9:30 A. M. of the 14th, and Queenstown 15th, arrived at Halifax at 5 A. M. to-day. She has 62 passengers for Boston, but no specie, and will sail for that port at 9 o'clock this morning.

The Bavarian, from New-York, arrived at Southampton on the evening of the 12th.

The Scotia, from New-York, reached Queenstown at midnight of the 13th.

The Great Eastern was being exhibited at Liverpool. She is advertised to leave Liverpool for New-York on the 1st of July, and again on the 16th of August.

GREAT BRITAIN.

In the House of Commons on the 12th, Mr. CLAY asked if the attention of the Government had been directed to the repeated interferences of the United States cruisers with British vessels in the West Indies, and particularly to the case of the steamer Circassian, captured in neutral waters, while bound from St. Thomas to Havana, and within twenty miles of port.

Mr. LAYARD could not give an answer at present, the case of the Circassian being under the consideration of the Law Officers of the Crown.

Lord DUNKELLIN asked if the Government had considered the memorial of the Atlantic Mail Company, (Galway line,) and if they had determined renewing postal service between Galway and America.

Lord PALMERSTON said the subject was still under consideration, and it was impossible to say what the decision would be, or when it would be given.

During the debate on the Supply bill, the course pursued by the Government at Lagos toward the Slave-trade was called in question, but Ministers offered satisfactory explanations, and the vote was agreed to. Exception was also taken to the vote of £40,000 for the continuation of the North American boundary commission, but upon Government explanations that little more would probably be required, the boundary having been traced, it was agreed to.

In the House of Lords, on the 13th, Earl CARNARVON called attention to Gen. BUTLER's proclamation, relative to the ladies of New-Orleans. He condemned it in severe terms, as without precedent in the annals of war; and asked if the Government had information of its authenticity, and if it had protested against it. He also asked if there was any truth in the rumors of the mediation of France and England. The success of such mediation would depend greatly upon the manner in which and the time at which it was offered; but he trusted the Government was in a position to give the subject favorable consideration.

Earl RUSSELL said that from Lord LYONS' dispatches the Government believed the proclamation was authentic, but with respect to any notice of the United States Government in the way of approval or disapproval, they had no information. Lord LYONS had made no representations to the American Government on the subject, and he did not appear to have any

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

President LINCOLN arrived in this City on Monday night, and proceeded immediately to West Point by a special train on the Hudson River Railroad—accompanied, it is stated, by Gen. POPE. Gen. SCOTT is at present stopping at West Point, and it is conjectured that the object of the President's visit is to confer with him on the progress of the campaign.

We received no dispatches from Gen. MCCLELLAN'S Army yesterday. The War Department assures us, however, that up to 2 o'clock in the afternoon it had received no dispatches indicating a battle.

It is stated that no less than thirty-three vessels, including the Yorktown and Jamestown, have been sunk in James River, and that the spaces between them have been filled in with rocks and other material. What will the easily-horrified Britishers say to this mode of obstructing navigation?

The rebels are gradually remarking the fact that the retreat from Corinth was not the great "strategic move" which the Richmond papers would fain have us believe. A correspondent of the Edgefield, (S. C.,) Advertiser, writing from Okolona, Miss., says the retreat from Corinth had upon BEAUREGARD'S army "a terribly demoralizing effect." He says: "Many declare they will quit the service and go home," and "Indeed, the Tennesseeans are now deserting every day." It also appears that BEAUREGARD has lost some of his laurels; "not a few of those who were heretofore foremost in his praise, are now the most bitter in denouncing him." The same correspondent says the Southern army "suffered immensely from sickness at Corinth," and "the whole country from there to Columbus, Miss., is one vast hospital." There are two thousand sick at Okolona, and they are in a terribly suffering condition. A correspondent of a Savannah paper says it is hoped by BEAUREGARD that HALLECK will follow him up, but talks of imitating in the West the movement of Stonewall JACKSON upon the Potomac. The same correspondent complains of the character of the food furnished the rebel army, and of the terrible sickness suffered by them at Corinth.

Ten soldiers who recently deserted from Fort Sumpter and took refuge on board the blockading steamer Seneca, state that the rebels on that post have made all arrangements for blowing up the fortifications as soon as it shall be apparent that Charleston must surrender.

The gunboat Jacob Bell, while making a reconnoissance up James River, on Saturday last, got aground on a shifting sandbar, and the rebels, taking advantage of her comparatively helpless condition, opened upon her from the shore with artillery, and injured her considerably before she could succeed in driving them off.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday petitions for the immediate passage of a Bankrupt law were presented.

A resolution was adopted instructing the Judiciary Committee to inquire into the statements, evidence, &c., of JOSEPH WEBB and ROBERT DALE OWEN in regard to arms contracts. A bill making an appropriation for the payment of bounties to the volunteer force was reported from the Finance Committee, but its consideration was postponed until to-day. Mr. GRIMES, of Iowa, made a speech in favor of establishing a Naval depôt on League Island, below Philadelphia. The Confiscation measures were then debated until the adjournment. During the debate the Vice-President laid before the Senate a message from the President, vetoing the bill authorizing the issue of small notes in the District of Columbia.

In the House, a bill appropriating five millions for the payment of bounties to volunteers was reported from the Committee of Ways and Means, and passed. A resolution was passed referring to a select Committee of seven all the papers and memorials on file relating to a ship canal around Niagara Falls, on the American side. The bill authorizing an additional issue of $150,000,000 Treasury Notes was considered, and finally passed as it came from the Committee, with the exception of the amendment of the first section made on Monday. It was resolved to have printed 75,000 copies of the TAX bill, with an index and marginal references. The Senate's amendments to the Pacific Railroad bill were concurred in, and the bill goes to the President for approval. The Senate's amendments to the bill prohibiting polygamy in the Territories, and annulling certain laws of Utah, were also concurred in. The House soon afterwards adjourned.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the arrival of the Arabia at Halifax, and the Etna at this port, we have advices from Europe to the 15th inst., eight days later than previously received. The news is important. Questions had been put in both Houses of Parliament relative to the rumors of mediation in America, and Gen. BUTLER'S proclamation regarding the ladies of New-Orleans. Earl RUSSELL and Lord PALMERSTON said the mediation rumors were unfounded. No propositions on the subject had been made, and there were no present intentions of such a step. Gen. BUTLER'S proclamation was denounced, and the hope expressed that the United States Government would disavow it. The cotton market was buoyant, and prices 1d.@¼d. higher. Sales of the week, 54,000 bales. Friday's sales were 7,000 bales, closing at the advance above noted. Breadstuffs were dearer and a trifle higher on Friday. Provisions were firmer. Consols 91¼@91¾. The bullion in the Bank of England had decreased £450,000. The first intimation of the defeat of the French troops before Puebla had been received, and it was semi-officially announced that reinforcements were to be sent to Mexico immediately.

Reports from the bark Kingfisher, United States Navy, lately received at New-Bedford, Mass., state that the first and second cutters, with their crews, have been captured by the enemy, while on an expedition up the Ocellia River for water. They left the ship on the 2d of June. A flag of truce was sent on shore on the 4th, and learned that two men were killed, and the remainder, twelve in number, including two wounded, taken prisoners, and carried to Tallahassee. Among the prisoners were CHARLES MILTON, of Dartmouth, and NEHEMIAH SHERMAN and WILLIAM HENRY PIERCE, of Rochester.

The New-Orleans Picayune mentions the discovery at the terminus of the Pontchartrain Railroad at the lake, of a submarine ram of cigar shape, made of iron, hollowed so that a number of men can inclose themselves in it. It is 24 feet long, and has a propeller which can be worked by hand. On each side of the ram there is a sort of fin made of iron, three feet long, and a foot and a half wide. By raising these wings or fins, the ram rises to the surface and sinks by their depression. The bow is sharply pointed, and when run against an ordinary vessel below the water mark, would be able to sink it in a very short time. It was discovered and raised by Col. CHARLES C. G. THORNTON, and Capt. GEORGE WIGGIN, late of New-London, Conn., at present Captain of the post at the lake.

Urgent calls are now made upon the United States Arsenal at Watertown by the Government, for powder, and the establishment is in operation on the Sabbath as well as the other days of the week. The kind of powder wanted is that used for siege guns.

The ship North America, which arrived at Boston on Saturday, had on board the bells which were contributed by the people of Louisiana, for the prosecution of the war against the Union, under the proclamation issued by BEAUREGARD. There are nearly eight hundred of them, varying in size from a cow bell to large church bells. Most of them are of the size used on steamboats and plantations. This consignment of bell-metal weighs about two hundred tons, and is valued at about $40,000.

The prize schooner Rosena, which was recently captured in Stono Inlet by the United States sloop-of-war Pawnee, arrived at Philadelphia on Monday, in charge of Prize Master REDDING. The Rosena is loaded with lead, cigars, paper, and other articles much needed in the South. Her papers were placed in charge of the Prize Commissioner soon after her arrival.

Gen. DUMONT returned to Nashville on Wednesday, from McMinnville. When his force left that place there was quite an enthusiastic display of Union sentiment on the part of the people. A large crowd turned out, and the rebel flag was hauled down, and the National colors run up in its stead, by the people. Stirring speeches were made by Gen. DUMONT and Col. CAMPBELL, of Ohio, which were loudly applauded.

The United States frigate Colorado, which arrived at Boston on Saturday, from the blockade off Mobile, had on board four deserters from Fort Morgan, named JAMES KELLY, JAMES BRADFORD, JOHN SHIELDS and BENJ. MARSHALL, all Northerners. KELLY is an old man-of-war's-man, and has made a cruise in the frigate Mississippi. They effected their escape from the fort about the 4th inst., in a boat, taking care to derange the tackle of the guard-boat in such a way as, in case of pursuit, considerable delay should attend the lowering of it into the water. These men report the rebel garrison as very disaffected. The fort is in command of Col. FOWLE, formerly a Lieutenant in the United States Navy. Two men who fled from Mobile, and succeeded in reaching the United States brig Bohio, a few days before the Colorado left, report that the rebels are making desperate exertions to fortify the city. All able-bodied citizens are compelled to work six hours per day on the fortifications, and everybody who has any nautical experience is impressed into service on the rebel steamers. The rebels have one iron-clad battery, and have raised a sunken ship, which they are also iron plating.

The will of the late E. P. CHRISTY has been offered for probate, and is contested by Mrs. HARRIET HARRINGTON, who claims to have been the lawful wife of deceased. Citations have been issued.

There was much excitement in the Gold Market. The price was rushed up to 103¾, but finally closed 103½. Exchange on London, 111@111¼. The Stock Market left off at an advance of ¼@1 ₩ cent. on the Share list. United States Notes of the Custom-house issue rose to 104@104¼ ₩ cent.

Breadstuffs were in active request yesterday, at advanced prices. Cotton was freely purchased, and was again higher. Groceries were quiet. A fair business was transacted in Provisions, Hay, Hops, ingot Copper, Chemicals, Fire Crackers, Laths, Lime, Spices, Tallow, and Wool. Whisky was more sought after, and was decidedly dearer. Coal, Candles, Dyewoods, Fruit, Hemp, Iron, Lead, Salt, Whalebone and Naval Stores were inactive. Moderate Freight engagements were reported.

The New-York Live Stock Markets are abundantly supplied with animals, with the single exception of Hogs. Beeves number 4,400, which is less than 100 below last week's supply, and coming in the season of strawberries and fresh vegetables, they sell better than might be anticipated. The stock was all disposed of at last week's rates, though the improved quality would really make them a little lower. They ranged from 7c. for poor cattle, to 8c. for fair steers, and 8½c. for choice picked animals, the whole averaging a trifle over 8c. A few heavy, fat Kentucky cattle could not be sold for over 8½c., and were withdrawn from market. Milch Cows sell very slowly since the enforcement of the late law touching adulterated milk and false names on the wagons. Veal Calves are in fair demand at 4½c.@5½c. Sheep and Lambs are near 50c. ₩ head lower, though in medium supply. Trade is dull, fair Sheep selling at 4c. ₩ lb., live weight. A few extra lots brought 4½c. Lambs vary from 6c. to 8c., most of them selling at 7c. Live Hogs are not as abundant as heretofore, only 6,400 being received for the past week. The old stock is now used up, and prices are advancing. Fat corn-fed Hogs are worth 5½c.@5¾c.

WHERE IS BEAUREGARD?—The whereabouts of Gen. BEAUREGARD has been one of the most pleasing and intricate problems of the war. At no given time has it been possible to fix the place of that volatile warrior. He is no sooner reported at Richmond than he turns up at Atlanta, and at the date of his latest general order at Corinth, is known, technically speaking, to be at Charleston. He has barely assumed command of a powerful army somewhere, when he is found at the head of a powerful army somewhere else. At no moment can the most observant place a metaphorical finger upon him. The attempt only proves that he is not there.

This to the student of events, who longs at the earliest possible moment to post his facts in the general ledger of history, is in the last degree vexatious. Practically, however, the matter is of the smallest consequence. Had we the most reliable assurance of the current statement that the mysterious rebel is now associated with LEE in the command of the Confederates at Richmond, the fact would cause no trepidation. The truth is, the world has lost faith in BEAUREGARD. Notwithstanding countless opportunities, he has never vindicated the promise of Fort Sumter. On the bloodless honors of that single day are his laurels still nourished. We know now that half his army was in full retreat from Manassas at the time the National troops fled panic-stricken from Bull Run. We watched him at Corinth, fleeing with a countless host from impregnable intrenchments, at the approach of the National Army. We have seen nowhere the slightest indication of skill or courage. Other unknown leaders have become famous for both. We have come to regard JACKSON and ANDY with the respect always due to gallant and skilful soldiers, whatever their political errors. SIDNEY JOHNSTON stood higher in the roll of honor, after his defeat and death, than before. But BEAUREGARD is the BEAUREGARD of a year ago—the hero of unfought fields and the conqueror of future enemies. Not only a humbug, but half-suspected to be a myth, it has really come to be a matter of small interest to know where the invisible warrior has for a moment a local habitation. The magic of the name is quite gone forever.

The President's Visit to West Point.

The announcement of President LINCOLN'S passage through New-York, on the way to West Point, occasioned yesterday a profound feeling of surprise. Ingenuity was utterly defeated in the effort to interpret the object of the sudden journey—a general impression that it was to borrow the military counsel of Gen. SCOTT that the President seized this moment to leave Washington, affording the only probable solution of the mystery. Gen. SCOTT is rusticating in the shadow of the Highlands. His health is too seriously shaken to admit of a trip to the Capital, there to afford the Government the results of his invaluable experience and calm sagacity; and the obvious alternative is for the Government to wait upon the veteran. Here, for the present, must be the limit of guess-work, touching this unexpected and obscure Presidential progress.

The very general sense of uneasiness occasioned by the news is not perhaps unnatural. The first feeling would justly be, that some exceedingly trying crisis in the fate of the nation had been reached, when the head of the Government, apparently distrusting his customary advisers, seeks the aid and counsel of a retired and exhausted servant of the people. Men only resort to oracles in extremities unmistakably desperate. Mr. LINCOLN has hitherto relied entirely upon the military advisers with whom, on the retirement of Gen. SCOTT, he prudently surrounded himself, reserving always, of course, a careful revisal of the opinions submitted to him to the forum of common sense—in the President's case a tribunal of much shrewdness and wisdom. It is a circumstance of profound significance that he finds reason at the present moment to desire maturer counsels. Assuming that consultation with Gen. SCOTT is really the object of the journey, it may be fairly inferred that the principle, dignus vindice nodus applies, and that a point of more than usual gravity has to be decided upon. And it is rather curious that the popular apprehension seems to have selected "danger to Washington" as the key-note of the business.

It may assist, perhaps, in relieving some of the unsettled feeling upon this head, to remember that since the 22d of February, 1861, when Mr. LINCOLN entered Washington incognito and by night, he has never been absent from the Capital, unless in the direction from which danger menaced. To his friends and advisers, he early explained his determination not to leave Washington for an hour so long as the slightest danger impended over it. His strict adherence to this self-prescribed law is a warrant that the Capital is now thoroughly secure. Had any peril threatened; were there the slightest fear that MCCLELLAN might be borne down by the enemy who would follow his shattered columns into Washington as they might so easily have done on the fatal 21st of July; or that the swift-moving JACKSON, returning upon his tracks, should realize his baffled plan of descending upon the Capital from Harper's Ferry; we may be sure the President would not be two hundred miles from his post of duty. His absence is indeed a pledge of security.

It is probably this sense of safety that has authorized Mr. LINCOLN to take the present step. In his companion, Gen. POPE, he is known to repose all the confidence of friendship, with ample trust in his military skill. In such society, to resort to the hero of the Mexican war, and with him to revise the programme of the war; to see how far and how wisely the original views of SCOTT himself have been deviated from; to take advantage of the veteran's criticisms upon the soldiership of the young leaders, who now conduct the active operations of the campaign; these are abundantly sufficient motives for the Executive visit, and will be found, we venture to predict, to be its entire inspiration.

A QUEER REBEL CHARACTERISTIC.—The Richmond Dispatch of last Saturday, in noticing the impatience of the rebel army for the combat, remarks: "Our men (the rebels) are burning to distinguish themselves. They treat the foe with profound contempt in any and every arm of the service." And further on, the same journal says that the "Federal troops feel in no hurry to attempt the capture of Richmond, for they are aware that the best blood of the South is ready to be shed in its defence." In these statements is undoubtedly to be discovered the whole secret of the recent movements of the rebels, which have so mystified mankind. It was the profound contempt of the "best blood" which flowed in the veins of the enormous rebel host under BEAUREGARD which led it to march contemptuously away from the region polluted by the presence of our Western troops. The flight of Gen. LOVELL and his high-blooded rebels from New-Orleans was only an indication of their contempt for the plebeian, Gen. BUTLER. The evacuation of Memphis by the rich-blooded rebels who lately occupied it, was only because they would not deign to walk the streets trodden by our soldiers. Gen. HINDMAN, of Arkansas, surrendered to Col. FITCH last week, either because he had too profound a contempt for the Ex-Senator to defile his blade with Yankee blood, or else because he was not willing to lose any of his own precious liquor. And so in a hundred other recent cases of rebel manœuvering and skedaddling; they were all out of contempt for us. It would not astonish us if the already profound contempt of the rebels at Richmond grew so very profound ere long that they could not think of fighting our troops at all, and thus that it was unauthorized, and thereupon this motion was made on behalf of the United States to take that certificate off from the files as improperly given, and to set aside the order of discharge.

It will be seen that the effect of the ground taken at the Custom-house would be, that whenever goods were entered for warehouse, the Collector need only to order them to be seized, for any cause whatever, in order thus to be able to deprive the importer of all right to reëxport them at all.

The Court, however, did not allow any such doctrine to prevail, but held that the certificate, though signed by a Deputy Collector, was as binding upon the United States as if signed by the Collector himself; and moreover, that the certificate was true, and the duties had been "secured" by the Warehouse Bond. The Court accordingly denied the motion to take the certificate off from the files, and ordered the order of discharge to stand.

Mediation Exploded—Important Declaration of the British Government.

The British Government has once more, through its official spokesmen, in each House of Parliament, made solemn and emphatic renewal of its determination to preserve a strict neutrality between the contestants in the great struggle on the American Continent. These mile-stones by the way are useful and reassuring, and never more so than at the present moment. Rumors of intervention, in the form of mediation, have, of late, been again rife—a flock of "noisome and timorous birds, prognosticating a day of sects and schisms." What availed it that great successes over the whole field of war gave pledge of its speedy termination in the crushing of the rebellion and the restoration of the Union, if foreign jealousy would see in this all the more reason for stepping in and baulking a result it fears? It is not to be denied, the conviction is not altogether baseless that the moment of the greatest danger of interference from abroad is precisely that when plainly our triumph draws nigh. If there exist in the breasts of European statesmen a desire to secure the permanent division of the United States—and without doubt this desire forms one of the elements in the complex web of wishes, hopes and fears entering into the Old World statesman's calculation—now is the moment when it must press with the greatest weight.

As though completely to justify this view of the matter, the European atmosphere has, for the past few weeks been filled with rumors of mediation on the part of England and France in the affairs of the United States. And it was obviously with a desire that the rumors might prove true that Earl CARNARVON in the House of Lords, on the 13th inst., and Mr. HORWOOD in the House of Commons, on the same day, called on Government for a statement as to the truth of the matter as to the reports of mediation. The response, so satisfactory to us, must have been a fearful wet blanket to rebel hopes. In the Upper House, Earl RUSSELL, on behalf of the Government, said that he was "glad the question of mediation had been put, for such rumors were likely to lead to much mischief. Her Majesty's Government had made no proposal to France in reference thereto, and the French Government had made no proposal to England. Therefore there had been no correspondence of any kind on the subject between the two Governments. Without, however, giving any opinion as to the propriety of offering mediation at some future day, if circumstances shall prove favorable, he must say that the present time appeared to him most inopportune. He considered that in the embittered state of feeling in America, it would lead to no good, and but retard the time for such an offer being favorably made." After the same kind precisely was the official response of Lord PALMERSTON in the Lower House. "No communication," he said, "had been received from the French Government on the subject, and as to the British Government, they had no intention at present to offer mediation."

We take it that these declarations are a frank and full avowal of British policy, without any lurking diplomatic guile or statecraft. Thus accepted, it is most satisfactory to us, as well as honorable to England, and cannot fail to have a very happy effect. It is, to be sure, but an act of justice; but there are occasions when an act of justice, conspicuously rendered, has an imputed merit beyond its intrinsic worth. Henceforth we know it's "hands off" in the awful work put upon us. Neither France nor England has any present purpose of interfering in our affairs, and it will require a total change of situation to develop any such purpose. It is well—well that they do not mean to wake up those thunders which would shake the firm-based continents to their centre. We are to be left free to conclude this war in our own time and way. We ask no better. Those secessionist wasps that have been buzzing of intervention and mediation in the French and English journals must now find their occupation gone.

WAREHOUSING GOODS—AN IMPORTANT DECISION.—We publish in another column a decision of Judge SHALLER'S, in the United States District Court, which is of interest to importers and to all parties who have business to transact at the Custom-house. It appears that Mr. LULLING, of this City, entered sugars at the Custom-house for warehouse, and afterwards offered an export entry of them. This was refused at the Custom-house because, as it was claimed, the goods had been fraudulently undervalued in the previous entry. The goods were thereupon seized by the Collector, and a suit was instituted to forfeit them for the undervaluation. The claimant then proposed to give bonds to the Court for the value of the goods. Judge BETTS decided, on motion, that the amount of the bonds should be the value of the goods, without the duties and bonds to this amount were given, and a renewed application was made to enter them for export; but it was again refused, the Collector taking the ground that the goods were still in custody of the Court, because, although bonds had been given for their value, yet it was necessary, in order to their discharge, that the claimant should file a certificate that the duties had been "paid or secured to be paid," which certificate he declined to give to the claimant. The claimant then procured a certificate to be signed by a Deputy-Collector, at the Custom-house, which contained these words, and filing it with the Court, obtained an absolute order of discharge, and the Marshal thereupon discharged the goods from custody, so that the reason given by the Collector for refusing the export entry no longer existed. But it was claimed that the Deputy-Collector, when he signed the certificate, did so inadvertently, thinking it was to be used for a different purpose, and thus that it was unauthorized, and thereupon this motion was made on behalf of the United States to take that certificate off from the files as improperly given, and to set aside the order of discharge.

It will be seen that the effect of the ground taken at the Custom-house would be, that whenever goods were entered for warehouse, the Collector need only to order them to be seized, for any cause whatever, in order thus to be able to deprive the importer of all right to reëxport them at all.

The Court, however, did not allow any such doctrine to prevail, but held that the certificate, though signed by a Deputy Collector, was as binding upon the United States as if signed by the Collector himself; and moreover, that the certificate was true, and the duties had been "secured" by the Warehouse Bond. The Court accordingly denied the motion to take the certificate off from the files, and ordered the order of discharge to stand.

Three Notable Measures Acted on by Congress in Two Days.

Congress, on Monday and yesterday, took final action upon, and sent to the President for his signature, three bills of vital National importance.

The first was the National Tax bill, which passed on Monday, and which we have already noticed.

Yesterday, final and favorable action was taken by the House upon the Senate's amendments to the Pacific Railroad bill; and the measure, having gone through all its legislative stages, has been engrossed and is now awaiting Mr. LINCOLN'S return from West Point. We suppose there is little doubt that both of these measures will receive the President's approval when he returns to headquarters. The latter is indeed a wonderful measure for a Government to adopt while waging a gigantic war for its own existence. But as the proportions of the rebellion are diminishing, these great pacific measures of internal unity and harmony come up to engage the attention of the country. The telegraph has already preceded the railroad to California. With almost electric rapidity the wires were stretched across the great plains over the Rocky Mountains and on to the Pacific. The railroad thread will be stretched westward slower than the electric thread; but when once the energies and the capital of the nation are brought to bear upon the work, there is no doubt that that too will be done with a rapidity no less wonderful. When, a year ago, the heaven-defying proportions of this rebellion were first comprehended, no one could have foretold that a few brief months would produce such a change as we already see. To many people the work of suppressing it seemed almost hopeless, and to foreign nations it appeared impossible. But the giant blows of the people have already brought it low. So the great Pacific work we are now about to undertake, in our attempt to span the Continent with a railroad, looks almost like a visionary undertaking—though it has been so long a subject of cool discussion, and a fundamental plank in political platforms. But when once the work is begun, the difficulties will, one after the other, rapidly disappear, and we have no doubt that the iron road will have reached the Rocky Mountains before the close of Mr. LINCOLN'S term of office—if he signs the present bill.

The other measure upon which final legislative action was taken yesterday, was that relating to Mormonism—a measure of far narrower range than the others, but whose importance cannot long be overlooked. The House concurred in the Senate's amendments to the House bill prohibiting polygamy in the Territories of the United States, and annulling the laws of Utah on that subject. We have already expressed our opinion on this measure; and we still think the end aimed at might have been accomplished in an easier way. But the bill has now gone up to the White House, and is a subject only for Executive action.

These three great measures await the President's consideration and action on his return from his tour to West Point. No graver civil subjects have occupied his attention since first he was seated in the Presidential chair.

HEALTH OF OUR TROOPS.—The army of the Southwest, the health and sanitary condition of which during the last half year have been about as bad as could be, will rapidly improve, notwithstanding the advent of the hot weather, now that it has been removed from the unwholesome region around Corinth—the malarious river bottoms of Southern Tennessee. That part of it stationed at Memphis will be in a fine, high, healthy region, which our troops in the deadly swamps of Cairo last Summer greatly longed to occupy. The column which has gone to East Tennessee will be in the very healthiest region of America—among the hills and life-giving breezes of that romantic section; and if it pushes forward into Southwestern Virginia, it will find much the same conditions and climate. The troops required to Summer along the line of Northern Alabama and Mississippi, can now select positions with good sanitary conditions—and there are plenty of such—where the health of the men will be maintained and improved. The rebels fled from Corinth at a most opportune moment, in this point of view, for our army. Since it encamped in Southern Tennessee, five months ago, it lost five by disease to one by the enemy. But now neither the enemy nor malaria are likely to give it much more trouble.

In the other divisions of the army the health of our troops is remarkable. At New-Orleans the papers note the amount of sickness as being very small. In Florida they have enjoyed uninterrupted good health. In South Carolina, notwithstanding that we occupy the most malarious section of the State, and our troops have had to do the hardest kind of field work, yet, owing to the admirable sanitary regulations ordered and enforced by Gen. HUNTER, there has been, in most of the regiments, a remarkable exemption from disease. One or two of the regiments have suffered somewhat, but the health of others has been so noteworthy that a special scientific investigation has been ordered into its causes. Our regiments in North Carolina have been models of good health; and notwithstanding they have had some stiff fights with the rebels, the average mortality has been smaller than among the same number of persons in civil life. The regiments in Western Virginia have suffered severely during the last three months, owing to the extraordinary hardships and exposure to which they have been subjected; but the region is one of the healthiest in the world, and the men, now that they have had leisure to recuperate, are again in fine condition. The troops around Washington do not show much more than the average mortality. The army of Gen. MCCLELLAN, since it was encamped on the Chickahominy, has, of course, suffered from the complaints that grow out of a malarious soil; but, so far as we get returns, we judge that the sickness is very much less, and much less fatal than some have represented. Taking the army in general, in all its divisions, and over the whole extent of the rebel country, and certainly the nation has cause of gratitude for its general good health and favorable sanitary conditions and prospects.

Material Condition of the Combatants.

There is hardly any point in which a comparison between the North and the South is devoid of interest, or where the results of a comparison do not show abundantly how utterly foolish was this rebellion. If we look at the number of soldiers only, this will be so; but even numbers are not of the first importance. In the sinews of war, in munitions, in artillery, in supplies of every kind, there is hardly any comparison to be instituted between the two sections. So, too, in the effects which the war has produced. One traveling through the North finds but little token of an impaired prosperity. He finds the laborer in the fields and the cities, as bustling and noisy with trade as ever. Some signs of war he sees in the number of uniforms which he meets everywhere, and the columns of the newspapers show that the war is the paramount object of interest. But the people are cheerful and happy; they bear the burdens and the anxieties which the war brings upon them lightly. The feeling of public calamity necessarily connected with war is swallowed up in love of country and of the cause. How is it at the South? Universal testimony tells us that the case is exactly reversed. Through large tracts of country the lands are going to waste for lack of labor. A National Captain who was taken at Bull Run and sent South, then brought back to Richmond, and then sent to Salisbury, N. C., writes that on this trip the crowds at the stations "were dull and silent. Every one that spoke said 'I wish the war was over.' It begins to look dark to them." A Union man, who escaped through Tennessee some months ago, said that the people there had come to speak universally in suppressed tones, and not a hopeful man was to be seen. Rebellion and treason have carried with them their own punishment, and at the hearths of the rebels all those

> "Shapes hot from Tartarus
> Were treachery with his thirsty dagger drawn;
> Suspicion, poisoning his brother's cup."

As to the privations of the luxuries and even the necessaries of life, the contrast is still more remarkable. When we have secured peace again, so that light can be let into those dark regions, we shall hear many a tale of horror, of the sufferings which treason has brought upon the people. And if this is so among the people generally, how much more will it be the case with the sick and wounded soldiers. Consider how different the facts are in the two cases. Our soldiers, if they are prostrated by wounds or disease, are borne at once by swift ships to the abundance of the North. Our great cities open their doors to them, and pour about them all that is needed for their comfort. And science and skill direct strong hands and willing hearts how to bring them all appliances for the recovery of health. But what of the Southern soldiers? What must have been the condition of those 10,000 who fell wounded at Fair Oaks? Where could they be carried? Richmond is full of them. Where else could they go? Where are the cities which could receive them? The South is not a land of cities, but of plantations. Think, too, what want must prevail of hospital stores. We can judge something of it by seeing how eagerly the rebels seize any of ours, where success gives them opportunity. And if the statistics of the wounded in a battle show so fearfully, even under the best circumstances, how more than fearful must the mortality among these men have been. If the facts are ever ascertained, it will surely be a dreadful page in history.

And when in addition to the wounded of Fair Oaks there are heaped up the wounded of the Titanic combat now impending, what horrors must there surely be. We draw consolation, however, from the firm belief that victory will bless our arms, and that the wounded of the rebels also will thus be within reach of the abundance of the North, and that they shall have the comparison brought home to them, not only between Northern abundance and Southern barrenness, but also between Northern kindness and Southern ferocity.

Another Trouble in Utah.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Monday, June 16.

A band of persons, numbering about 1,000 men, women and children, under the leadership of one MORRIS, who claimed to be the "Prophet Moses, reappeared on earth," formed a settlement thirty miles north of this city, and committed numerous depredations on the citizens in the vicinity. They refused to labor for their support, believing that the Lord would supply their wants. Three of their number, disgusted with the imposition, attempted to leave, but were arrested and placed in confinement, heavily ironed. A writ of habeas corpus was issued by Chief Justice KINEY, which was treated with contempt. A sufficient time having elapsed for producing the prisoners, a second writ, together with an order for the arrest of MORRIS for contempt, and for the arrest of the leaders of the gang for false imprisonment, was issued. For the execution of this, a posse of 250 infantry and artillery was ordered out on the 11th by Acting Governor FRANCIS MORRIS, and his men strongly intrenched and thoroughly armed.

Fighting ensued. Two of the Marshal's posse were killed. On the 15th the rebels pretended to surrender, but resisted anew as soon as our attacking party approached. In a hand to hand fight, MORRIS was killed, and another leader mortally wounded. The rebels were then overcome. Several women and children were killed during the siege. The Mormonites refusing to remove them to a place of safety. The prisoners captured number 147, and will be brought to Court to-morrow.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 24.

NO WAR NEWS.

Dispatches received to-day at the War Department indicate quiet in all directions. The telegraph lines are in good working order to all important points.

FROM FORTRESS MONROE AND RICHMOND.

The party of Representatives and their friends who left in the steamer Baltimore Friday evening returned yesterday afternoon, having visited Fortress Monroe, Norfolk, the Gosport Navy-yard, Yorktown and White House. They report a gradual increase in the number of Unionists at Norfolk and Portsmouth, but are of the unanimous opinion that, for the most part, the general sentiment is one of antipathy to the Government. Two-thirds of those who have taken the oath of allegiance were formerly employed in the Navy-yard, and the presumption is that they think by this course to have the yard restored to its former condition. All who have visited the ruins are strong in their expressions of condemnation, and will do all that can be done to prevent a reconstruction. The White House is still guarded. Reports were in circulation at that point yesterday, that it would soon be taken for officers' quarters. A party of gentlemen, who left Yorktown last evening, give very unsatisfactory accounts as to the condition of our hospitals at that point. The sick and wounded lack that attention which is justly due them, and complain bitterly of their treatment. There are about two thousand soldiers on the sick and wounded list.

Persons who visited Yorktown within the past week on a tour of inspection, and who were opposed to McCLELLAN's movements before that tour, are now convinced of the propriety of his plan of operation. After reviewing the roads, bridges and parallels made by him, and their close proximity to the rebel fortifications, they have come to the conclusion that if let alone he will take Richmond in the same manner.

THE TREASURY NOTE BILL.

The Treasury Note bill has passed the House by Yeas, 79; Nays, 65.

THE TREATY WITH MEXICO.

The treaty between the United States and Mexico for the extradition of criminals is officially promulgated. The offences are confined to principals, accessories or accomplices, as to murder, assassination, piracy, forgery, counterfeiting, larceny, &c., and kidnapping, the last defining the same to be the taking and carrying away of a free person by force or deception. The provisions of the treaty are not applied in any manner to any crime or offence of a purely political character, nor shall it embrace the return of fugitive slaves.

PASSES.

The Secretary of War, to-day, ordered that all applications for passes or permits for persons or property within the lines of the United States forces shall hereafter be made to Brig.-Gen. WADSWORTH, Military Governor of the District of Columbia, and be submitted to such terms and conditions as he may prescribe.

A CAPTURE.

The Navy Department has received dispatches stating that, on the night of the 7th inst., the schooner Kenosa, formerly the Garibaldi, 70 tons burden, built opposite New-Orleans, ran into Stono River and anchored near the entrance, not knowing it to be in our possession. She was, therefore, taken prisoner, we having seven gunboats in that vicinity. She was last from Nassau, and had a cargo of lead and a few shoes. She was taken by the Pawnee and sent to Philadelphia.

THE ACT TO PUNISH FRAUD.

The following order has just been issued from the War Department:

"The Secretary is of the opinion that the act to prevent and punish fraud on the part of officers intrusted with making contracts on the part of the Government, approved June 2, 1862, applies only to such contracts as under the laws and regulations in force at the time of its passage, were required to be in writing. The execution of the act in any other sense is utterly impracticable, and an attempt otherwise to enforce it would everywhere instantly arrest the operations of our forces. It is therefore ordered that all contracts which by the present regulations are prescribed to be made in writing, shall be made in quintuplicate, of which four shall be disposed of according to such regulations, and one shall be sent by the officers making and signing the same, to the Return Office of the Department of the Interior, within thirty days after the contract is made, together with all proposals, and a copy of any advertisement published by him touching the same, attached and verified in the manner required by the act above specified."

POSTAL MATTERS.

Information has been received at the Post-office Department that the service by the Overland Mail Company was recommenced on the 10th inst. The mails from Colorado for the past month were visibly increased by the heavy immigration which has gone further this Spring; while the presence of an increased number of troops at Forts Kearney and Laramie will account for an increase at those points. On the night of the 18th inst. there were received at St. Joseph, Mo., twenty-six pouches, under the brass lock, and ten under the iron lock, being mail matter which had been delayed by the late troubles.

During the past two or three days several Post-offices have been reopened in Tennessee, and mail facilities are being gradually extended throughout the State.

GEN. POPE.

Major-Gen. POPE arrived here to-day and is enthusiastically welcomed. He appears in deep black citizen's dress, and is not generally recognised while moving about his hotel this evening. He was requested to visit Washington to consult with the military authorities, if consistent with his duties in the West.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 24.

Mr. HARRIS, of New-York, (Rep.,) presented several petitions from citizens of New-York, asking for the immediate passage of a bankrupt act.

Mr. WILSON, of Indiana, (Rep.,) offered a resolution that the Judiciary Committee be instructed to inquire into the statements, evidence, &c., in the report of JOSEPH HOLT and ROBERT DALE OWEN in regard to certain contracts to furnish arms to the Government, and inquire what legislation is necessary to punish Senators and Representatives who shall lend their official influence to procure contracts, and who shall accept, directly or indirectly, any money or other reward, or compensation either certain or contingent therefor. Adopted.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Rep.,) from the Finance Committee, reported a bill making appropriations for the payment of the volunteer force bounties.

After discussion it was postponed until to-morrow.

Mr. GRIMES, of Iowa, (Rep.,) moved to take up the Bill authorizing the Government to accept League Island, in the Delaware River, for naval purposes. He spoke at some length in favor of the passage of the bill, claiming that the events of the war had conclusively shown that the Government must have a large and well-appointed navy, and must have some point convenient and accessible, at which to commence the erection of such a navy. At present we have not the convenience for building such a navy as the honor and interest of the country demand. He referred to the immense naval establishments of England and France, as compared with the scanty conveniences of the United States for navy-yards, &c. England has an area at her seven principal navy-yards of 330 acres, and including the island of St. Mary's, 614 acres, with a water frontage, not including slips and docks, of nearly five miles, 61 building slips and 29 dry-docks. France has an area at her five principal yards of 1,187 acres, nearly 18 miles water front, 75 building slips and 26 large dry-docks. This Government has in its remaining yards 21,818 acres of area, 4,300 feet of water frontage, 12 building slips and four dry-docks, two of which are comparatively useless. This Government has no conveniences at all for building iron vessels. League Island has great advantages for a large naval establishment; has an area of about 600 acres, and a water front of nearly six miles; especially advantageous for building iron ships, being in fresh water, as salt water is injurious to iron vessels. This island is also near a great commercial city, near to the great iron and coal fields of Pennsylvania, and from its position it is entirely defensible.

The confiscation bill was taken up.

Mr. SAULSBURY, of Delaware, (Opp.,) said history would hand down to the future, with execration and condemnation, many of the acts of the present day. Arbitrary and despotic power are now not satisfied with trampling on every constitutional right of our citizens, but has dared profanely to enter the temple of Justice and drag her minister from the altar. He who thus invades the temple of Justice proves himself a tyrant, capable of any assault on the liberties of the people. Under the pretence of suppressing a causeless rebellion, the Executive Department of the Government were, in his judgment, daily engaged in the grossest violations of the fundamental law. Who are they who are thus murdering civil liberty? Those who, in the pretense of philanthropy, having plunged the country into all the horrors of civil war, now evidence their sincerity by shouting "loyalty," while engaged in destroying the liberties of the people, and even go so far as to dare impeach the loyalty of those men who dare to stand by the Constitution. He said it was his deliberate, solemn conviction that either abolitionism or constitutional liberty must forever die. The two cannot exist together. Abolitionism has for the time being, dissolved the Union, and while it lives the Union will remain dissolved. No free people either will or ought to submit to its sway. It has been the author of all our political woes. Abolitionism has always been aggressive on the liberties of the Government, and culminated in the attempt to invade a peaceful State. Then the Republican Party, in the same aggressive spirit, nominated a man for the Presidency who declared that "a house divided against itself cannot stand," and the war-clouds immediately began to threaten. Senator CRITTENDEN offered a compromise which would have averted the war, but abolitionism refused the compromise and deliberately chose war. Then arose the cry of "On to Richmond," when we met with the bloody defeat at Manassas. Then Congress passed a resolution that the only object of the war was to suppress the rebellion, and nothing else, and the loyal people of the Border States took heart and courage. How has Congress kept the pledge? They have abolished Slavery in the District of Columbia, and established a paradise for free negroes from Delaware and Maryland, and these are supported by taxing white men. They are paying negro teamsters $30 a month, while our white soldiers are working for $13 a month. They have legalized negro testimony. They have taken this time to establish diplomatic relations with Hayti and Liberia, and the council chambers of the nation have been turned into a house of wailing for the wrongs of the negro. He contended that the present war was not merely an insurrection or rebellion, but a great revolution. He would take the admissions of the Senator from Vermont, (COLLAMER) and the Senator from Pennsylvania, (COWAN) and assume that the present Confederate Government is a government de facto. He contended that when an old government is fully ousted, and a new one firmly established, those who give allegiance to the latter cannot be punished for treason to the former. The right of revolution has been asserted in this country, and he thought it settled that where a revolution is inaugurated under circumstances of Free success, peace probable, it may become the duty of every citizen to yield allegiance to the new government; and where there is only a reasonable probability of success, such support to the new government is not a felony which will subject such citizens to imprisonment and death, or the confiscation of their property. It is not right to visit severe punishment on men for doing what they conscientiously believe to be right. A large mass of these men at the South believe that they are right—that they owe allegiance to their State as well as to the Government. Humanity, charity, and all the usages of the civilized world cry out against severe punishment of those who yield allegiance to a Government de facto, where a Government de jure ceased to protect them, or have any power. He denied that there was any cause or justification for the present revolution. He admitted the right of the Government to prevent the secession of any State, but such right was not derived from any authority in the Constitution, but from the right of self-preservation. He thought that if there had been no Slavery in the Southern States, there would never have been any Confiscation bills. The passage of this bill will only tend to prolong the war, and make the separation of the States complete.

The Vice-President here laid before the Senate a message from the President, returning the bill authorizing the issue of small notes in the District of Columbia, without his signature, and stating his objections to the bill.

To the Senate of the United States:

The bill, which has passed the House of Representatives and Senate, entitled "An Act to repeal that part of an Act of Congress which prohibits the circulation of notes of a less denomination than five dollars in the District of Columbia," has received my attentive consideration, and I now return it to the Senate, in which it originated.

The bill proposes to repeal the existing legislation prohibiting the circulation of bank notes of a less denomination than five dollars, within the District of Columbia, without permitting the issuing of such bills by banks not now legally authorized to issue them. In my judgment, it will be found impracticable, in the present condition of the currency, to make such a discrimination. The banks have generally suspended specie payments, and a legal sanction given to the circulation of the irredeemable notes of one class of them will almost certainly be so extended in practical operation as to include those of all classes, whether authorized or unauthorized. If this view be correct, the currency of the District, should this act become a law, would certainly and greatly deteriorate, to the serious injury of honest trade and honest labor.

Second—This bill seems to contemplate no end, which cannot otherwise be more certainly and beneficially attained. During the existing war, it is peculiarly the duty of the National Government to secure to the people a sound circulating medium. This duty has been, under existing circumstances, satisfactorily performed, in part at least, by authorizing the issue of United States notes receivable for all Government dues, except customs, and made a legal tender for all debts, public and private, except interest on the public debt. The object of this bill submitted to me—namely, that of providing a small note currency, during the present suspension—can be fully accomplished by authorizing the issue, as part of the emission of United States notes necessary, by the circumstances of the country, of notes of a similar character, but of a less denomination than $5. Such an issue would answer all the beneficial purposes of the bill, would save a considerable amount to the Treasury, would greatly facilitate payment to soldiers and other creditors of small sums, and would furnish to the people a currency as safe as their own Government.

Entertaining these objections to the bill, I feel myself constrained to withhold from it my approval, and return it for the further consideration and action of Congress.

JUNE 23, 1862. ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, (Rep.,) was earnestly in favor of the passage of the bill from the House, and as earnestly opposed to the passage of the bill as reported by the Special Committee, as he thought the latter, in many of its provisions, entirely without the support of the Constitution, and in violation of some of its most important provisions. In the first place, it mitigates the punishment of treason. Treason has always been regarded as the most heinous of crimes, and he did not think this the proper time to reduce such an offence down to an equality with petit larceny. Again, the bill from the Special Committee seizes the property of every rebel of every class, whether ringleader or person forced into the rebel army, without any distinction. It also provides for a criminal prosecution in a Court, not according to the proceedings prescribed by the Constitution. It dispenses with trial by jury, and with the right of a person to be present at his trial. It also takes away his property contrary to due process of law according to the Constitution. He argued at some length, and quoted various authorities to show that the due process of law required by the Constitution, required a trial by jury and the presence of the party in Court, to answer the charge against him before he could be condemned or punished. This bill punishes a party for his non-appearance in Court voluntarily to answer to the charge against him, by taking away all his property, thus turning over to the Court that which Congress dare not do, and which the Court is expressly forbidden to do. This was a degradation of the Judiciary, and he would never vote for any such bill.

Executive Session. Adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 24.

Mr. STEVENS, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported a bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the payment of the bounties to volunteers under the act of July last. Passed.

A similar bill was recently lost in a Committee of Conference—the managers failing to agree on some of the amendments.

Mr. VAN HORN, of New-York, (Rep.,) introduced a resolution, which was passed, referring to a Select Committee of Seven all the papers and memorials on file relating to a ship canal around Niagara Falls on the American side.

The bill authorizing an additional issue of $150,000,000 of United States Treasury notes was then considered.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, (Rep.,) ineffectually sought to add a proviso, that no new notes shall be issued after the same shall exceed $400,000,000.

The bill was then passed by Yeas, 78; Nays, 34.

[NOTE.—The bill in question is the same as introduced by Mr. STEVENS, and published in the latter part of last week, with the exception of the amendment made yesterday.]

NAYS—Messrs. Allen of Illinois, Baker, Biddle, Brown of Rhode Island, Buffington, Calvert, Clements, Cobb, Reeder Conkling, Corning, Cravens, Crisfield, Dawes, Delano, Dunlap, Eliot, English, Foulke, Goodwin, Grider, Harding, Johnson, Law, Menzies, Morrill of Vermont, Norton, Pendleton, Perry, Pheips of Missouri, Porter, Rice of Massachusetts, Richardson, Rollins, Shiel, Stiles, Thomas of Massachusetts, Thomas of Maryland, Vibbard, Wadsworth, Walton of Vermont, Ward, Webster, White of Ohio, Wickliffe, Wood, Woodruff.

A resolution was passed to print 75,000 copies of the income and internal tax-bills passed yesterday, with an index and marginal references.

The Senate's amendments to the Pacific Railroad bill were concurred in—106 against 31.

The consideration of the bill for the construction of a ship canal for the passage of armed and naval vessels from the Mississippi River to Lake Michigan was postponed till Monday.

The House concurred in the Senate's amendments to the House bill prohibiting polygamy in the Territories of the United States, and disapproving and annulling the laws of Utah on that subject. The offence is punishable with a fine of not exceeding $500, and imprisonment for five years. Considerable miscellaneous business of comparatively little consequence was transacted.

THE COMMENCEMENT SEASON.

Exercises at Princeton College—Address by Rev. T. L. Cuyler—Junior Exhibition.

The Commencement exercises of Nassau Hall, the third oldest College in America, are in progress this week. Yesterday, at 11 A. M., the members of the Whig and Cliosophic Societies met in the Chapel of the College, and proceeded to the First Presbyterian Church, where the exercises were held. The President of the College, Rev. Dr. JOHN MACLEAN, D. D., presided, and introduced the orator of the day, Rev. T. L. CUYLER, a graduate of the College and a member of the Cliosophic Society, which, by rule, was entitled to the orator of the day.

Mr. CUYLER's address, which was quite worthy of his reputation, was listened to by an audience which crowded the large church. He began with a glowing tribute to the College, its history, and the eminence of its graduates. He said: "I have come to revisit the spot where DICKINSON and DAVIES watched beside the cradle of academic culture, in a rustic hamlet; where WITHERSPOON's voice rang for liberty above the thunder of hostile guns; where SOUTHARD and FRELINGHUYSEN (New-Jersey's Castor and Pollux) began their bright career; where young BURDIN mused beside the Castalian fount, and BRAINARD TAYLOR mused beside the cross; where JAMES MADISON strewed his strength for great constitutional combats; above all, the spot from which President EDWARDS, America's greatest philosopher, soared upward in his chariot of fire—his sepulchre still with you until this day." The orator then reviewed the characters of the eminent men who had been connected with Princeton, and paid fitting eulogies upon Dr. JAMES W. ALEXANDER, Prof. HENRY, Prof. DOD and Dr. ARCHIBALD ALEXANDER. From this he passed to his theme, "The Highest use of Intellect," as displayed in learning and eloquence.

The learning was to be distributed as a reservoir distributes its waters. No man was to monopolize his own attainments. The nature and essence of true eloquence was then depicted, and a full description given of the great Senatorial combat between WEBSTER and HAYNE of South Carolina. From this the orator passed to the great questions of the hour. He said that the great problem is, "How to restore, how to rebuild, how to perpetuate a free and liberal Government that ever shed its sunshine on a people." The old Union had been made weak by the discordance of Northern and Southern ideas and ethics in regard to labor and the organism of society. The clay and iron in the feet of the national image had refused to coalesce. The antagonism had been increasing for a quarter of a century, until disunity had become disunion! The one remedy was in bringing about a homogeneousness of society and institutions North and South. The South had been becoming more and more feudal and aristocratic. The North more and more democratic.

In the restored Union, the speaker predicted a unity of views and sympathies, founded on a oneness of social institutions and of constitutional principles.

The orator closed with a stirring appeal to the young men before him to give themselves in hearty self-sacrifice for their whole country. The orator's whole address breathed the most thorough and uncompromising devotion to Union and liberty. The possibility of the overthrow of the Republic was treated as a phantasm of absurdity, and the young men were exhorted to stand by the starry ensign of the Union until its folds wrapped round them as their winding sheet.

After the conclusion of the oration, the members of the two Societies adjourned to their respective halls for the transaction of their regular annual business. This done, the Alumni met in the "Commons," where they had a pleasant social gathering, friends meeting after many years of separation.

The exercises of the evening, which belonged entirely to the Junior class, attracted an assemblage as large as that of the morning. The orations of the Seniors were characterized by personal excellence. The rivalry between the two Societies was stimulated by their respective friends, and it would be difficult to mark those who were most favored by the applause of the assemblage.

The exercises of the day were enlivened by the music of a band engaged for the occasion. To-day the regular commencement exercises will take place.

Commencement of the Senior Department of Girls' School (Public) No. 47.

A large gathering of invited guests attended the Commencement exercises of the Girls' School in Twelfth-street, presided over by Miss LYDIA F. WADLEIGH, Principal. Chancellor FERRIS, Judge DALY and the City Superintendent of Public Schools, with his assistant, and some dozen others, trustees, &c., occupied the platform. The Principal sat toward the front of the platform, and assisted Mr. EDWARD ROBINSON, Jr., who read of the order of exercises. Mr. J. F. BRISBIN, who has charge of the musical department of the school, presided at the piano. Singing and prayer, concluding with a pretty chorus, "Chapel Bells," preceded the introductory composition, which was read by Miss ELNORA D. HALL. Another, by her classmate, Miss ANNA E. SMITH, entitled "Obstacles Incentives to Exertion," and a sweet solo by EMMA S. THOMPSON, comprised the first part of the entertainment, after which came a sort of poetical, historical, oratorical prophecy, conducted by the graduating class. It was called: "The Past, Present and Future of the Class of 1862, as Portrayed by its Poet, Historian, Orator and Prophet." The essays were original, and very rich in personal allusions to the proclivities of character and disposition displayed by the different members of the graduating class.

"A Little Leaven" followed, being a composition by LIZZIE MCCREADY, who touched upon politics as if she had been used to it, and declared that the leaven which is now permeating our constitutional loaf was set to rise by JOHN C. CALHOUN, at the moment he made out and presented to his South Carolinian constituents those first secession articles. Next came "Contentment," in a chorus of the whole department; after which the Valedictory, which dignified document was delivered by Miss MARY R. BISHOP.

The flow of soul seemed, upon this occasion, to precede the feast of reason, which was served up in very acceptable style by Hon. Judge DALY, after the young ladies had subsided amid the gauzy waves of their delicate costumes, to await the happy moment when a diploma should be handed each honored fair. The Judge admitted that he found himself in a quandary, inasmuch as the Past of these, his young auditors, had been so eloquently dwelt upon by their "Historian," their Present detailed by their "Poet," and their Future completely disposed of by the "Prophet," so that nothing was left him but to follow in the wake of one or all of these. He chose to speak of their future, as there he saw his safest ground. He led off with anything but a complimentary remark, reflecting, as it did, upon the women of America, who, he assured these rising representatives, ceased to improve in intellectual culture as soon as school duties were abandoned. They at once turned their attention to getting married. He passed a very high eulogium upon women who never married, and, excusing himself to the married ladies present, declared that they were frequently the most useful and delightful of their sex, and retained their intellectual fascinations so that even at the age of seventy they were more attractive to men of taste than the most brilliant physical beauty. His remarks were very humorous as well as sensible, and just as the ladies were fairly persuaded to listen to his plain talk with forbearance, deeming him, of course, without any other than bachelor experiences, he suddenly disappointed them by announcing himself one who had paid the highest compliment he could to their sex, by taking one of them to be his companion for life, and made his peace thorough by drawing pictures of true womanhood. He retired amid great applause.

An address was also made by Mr. S. S. RANDALL, in which he bestowed the highest possible praise upon the pupils who had so richly earned their diplomas, each one was bound in red, white and blue silk. The young ladies were badges of the same.

After all ceremony was concluded, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was given with remarkably fine effect, the audience rising at the close and joining in the life-stirring chorus. The hall was liberally strewn with flowers. Huge bouquets and baskets of choice flowers were distributed about the platform, evergreen mottos and wreaths adorned the walls, and the very ceiling seemed to be shooting forth inverted plants. The arrangement of the ceiling, with its interlacing of evergreens and drooping bouquets, was unusual, and exceedingly appropriate to the decoration of such an expanse as that of the exhibition hall.

Mr. ED. ROBINSON, Jr., made a few remarks at the close. Thirty-one young ladies formed the graduating class. The exercises occupied over three hours.

The Eleventh Ward Homicide.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE AFFRAY—THE RESULT OF THE POST-MORTEM EXAMINATION.

Coroner NAUMANN yesterday afternoon impannelled a jury in the case of PETER GIER, the German who, on Sunday morning last, was found in a dying condition upon the sidewalk, in Third-street near Avenue C. In the TIMES, of yesterday, we published all that was then known of the occurrence. Deputy-Coroner, Dr. BRIEN, made a post-mortem examination of the deceased, yesterday, and from that we learn that death was the result of an extensive fracture of the skull upon the left side of the head, extending from near the crown down to the left ear. There was also an abrasion over the left eye. A large quantity of congested blood was found upon all that portion of the brain over which the skull was found to be fractured. It is believed by some who have examined the condition of the deceased, that the blow which caused the injuries must have been given by a heavy iron weapon, while others claim that so serious a fracture could easily be produced by a violent fall upon the edge of the curb-stone. Very little additional light could be thrown upon this point yesterday, for the reason, that the Coroner was unable to take any testimony, owing to the lateness of the hour, when a suitable jury was obtained, and the post-mortem concluded. The further investigation of the case was then adjourned until 1 P. M. to-day, when it will be proceeded with at the Eleventh Precinct Station-house. All of the parties arrested on Monday night, upon the charge of having been engaged in the commission of the homicide, are in the meantime held at the Station to await the result of the inquest. There is considerable feeling upon the subject in that Ward among the friends of the respective parties. At the funeral of the deceased, which took place from his late residence yesterday afternoon, there was a large attendance of his relatives and acquaintances, and many were the expressions of sympathy for his family, and deep and loud were the curses pronounced against the party or parties, who, they alleged, were guilty of his murder. Coroner NAUMANN and his Deputy, also the Captain of the Eleventh Precinct and the officers under him, are doing everything in their power to ferret out, and bring to the bar of public justice, the parties guilty of this offence.

The Ladies' Home for the Sick and Wounded Soldiers—The Issue with the North Eastern Dispensary.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

By inserting the following correction of an error made in a statement with regard to the "Ladies' Home for Sick and Wounded Soldiers," signed "Visiter," published in your edition of yesterday, you will do an act of justice.

The two rooms on the first floor, therein represented as "indispensable to the comfort and convenience of the wards directly opposite," are not, as implied, used for dispensary purposes—the consulting and operating rooms being in the basement—but are reserved solely for the monthly meetings of the Board of Managers of the North Eastern Dispensary.

Can it be permitted that any part of this noble edifice, erected at public expense, should be applied to so insignificant a use, especially at this time, when the City is so loudly called upon to provide for the reception of thousands of our sick and wounded soldiers, and when other cities are giving their churches and houses for their accommodation? Fiat justicia ruat qua coelum. CITIZEN.

The Exhibition of Strawberries.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your notice in to-day's TIMES of the "Exhibition of Strawberries," which, from the names of exhibitors and varieties, I perceive to be the one made on Friday and Saturday last at the office of the American Agriculturist, does great injustice both to exhibitors and to the management. I beg that you will allow me to make the statement that not a single exhibitor of the 30 or more, who contributed to our show, and intended to compete for the premiums offered by Mr. JUDD, failed to present his berries in time. PARSON & Co.'s berries, which arrived late in the afternoon, were distinctly and discreetly marked "Sixty-five cents per case, for exhibition only." Very truly yours,

M. C. WELD, Editor Agriculturist.

Office American Agriculturist, June 24, 1862.

The Late Lieut.-Col. Palmer.

Lieut.-Col. PALMER, whose decease by typhoid fever, contracted in front of Richmond, we have already announced, was brevetted for gallant and meritorious services in the reconnoissances at Mathias Point and Flint's Hill, in Virginia, when the Army of the Potomac crossed the river to take possession of Manassas. His corps rank was that of Major of Topographical Engineers, and he was the second officer of that corps in Gen. MCCLELLAN's Staff. He had distinguished himself at the hard-contested fight of Williamsburgh, receiving the approval of Gen. STONEMAN, who had specially asked for his services with his advance. On that occasion he was one of the first of our officers under the enemy's fire.

Col. PALMER was in charge of the Coast Survey Office at Washington, up to the time of joining the army for active military service in the field, and had distinguished himself there by his administrative power and tact in the management of the numerous persons immediately under his charge. He had also, for several years, taken part in the field operations of the Coast Survey.

He was prepared for usefulness as an Engineer by a voluntary course of studies at West Point, which in early youth he had been permitted by the Superintendent, Col. THAYER, to follow, by the aid of the Professors of the School.

In all the domestic relations of life, Col. PALMER was most excellent—a good son, brother and husband—his loss to his family is beyond repair.

He lived for usefulness, and few men have worked so fully up to the measure of the talent with which his Maker endowed him.

Deafness, Impaired Sight, Noises in the head and sore throat, cured by the novel and scientific principle, which restores hearing in the most hopeless cases, by the well-known oculist and aurist of New-York, Dr. VON EISENBERG.

NEW-YORK, June 14, 1862.

I have great pleasure to add my testimony to the number of others which Dr. Von Eisenberg's great skill has already gained for him. I was suffering from deafness, accompanied by a very unpleasant discharge from my ear. The Doctor operated on my ear, removing a polypus with a gentleness that fully demonstrated the efficiency of the scientific system peculiar to him. I am completely restored to hearing. PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless this remedy is used. This is what distinguishes it and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 200 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

REPORT FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

A Telling Speech Delivered by Gov Stanly at Washington.

A Gathering of Citizens from Seventeen Counties.

From the Newbern Progress.

The speech of Gov. STANLY, which was delivered at Washington, N. C., on the 17th inst., before the great Union Mass-meeting, was full of moderation and eloquence, and it may be pronounced one of the finest productions of the day. It was received with the utmost satisfaction by both the Federal troops and the citizens of the Old North State, who were present from seventeen counties.

Notice was given some two weeks since to the people in the interior that one and all, loyal and disloyal, might come into our lines and hear Gov. STANLY. Seventeen counties were represented in this great gathering, which was the largest ever assembled in the old Capital of this State. His great speech will reverberate in the hearts of the Old North State, and be the means of bringing her back into the Union at once.

On a commission that Capt. WARREN's rebel cavalry, in the vicinity of Washington, N. C., is completely demoralized and partially disbanded, but a very few remaining. Many of its members came to hear Gov. STANLY at Washington, and remained.

SPEECH OF GOV. STANLY DELIVERED AT WASHINGTON, N. C., ON TUESDAY, JUNE 17, 1862.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: My appearance here to-day calls to mind many scenes of the past. I thank God that we are permitted to meet in council once more. Ever since this infernal war, brought on by wicked politicians who desired power, I have had no comfort. My thoughts have been directed toward these battle fields. Night and day have I been watching events. I could not hear a word from my native State, consequently I was unable to learn anything definite in regard to you. However bad I may have been, no man can say I ever deserted him in any particular, or intentionally let him suffer. I come to you with a bleeding heart, honest and sincere motives, desiring to give you some plain thoughts. I am pleased to see so many of my old friends who have been so true to me, some of whom gave me a start in the world. It is to them I come to talk. Five thousand miles have I come to confer with you. I desire no promotion; I came for no love of gain; I ask nothing for myself.

I did not support Mr. LINCOLN. BELL and EVERETT were my choice. I understood the wicked intentions of these Southern leaders. I have known them long and well. I looked forward to this outbreak. I saw it was inevitable, and under the circumstances I considered BELL and EVERETT the most acceptable men.

I do not desire to discuss, or enter into all the features of this war, nor talk about politics. You all know what my politics have been for the past twenty-five years.

How came North Carolina out of the Union? You say that President Lincoln's proclamation drew you into this war. How so? What was his duty when he took the oath of office, when he was sworn to maintain the Union and enforce the laws? Has he not done right in doing what the Constitution required him to do? How could he do differently? Was he to act the part of a pettifogging trickster and gambler, and wink at this unlawful attempt at secession? What would have been his fate had he attempted thus to trifle with the sacred rights of the people, and allowed a Government to be broken up which he had sworn to preserve? Would he not have been impeached and justly hung for thus violating his oath of office? I again ask, How could he do differently?

What are the duties of a sheriff? Is he not expected to enforce the law? Should a mob attempt to resist him, is it not his duty to call upon the people for assistance, to enable him to enforce the law? This is what the President has done—he could do nothing else, he could pursue no other course. Suppose New-Jersey should attempt to secede, and New-York and the neighboring States should refuse to assist in obliging her to respect the Constitution and laws of the country. Would it not be the duty of North Carolina to furnish the President with troops to enable him to execute the laws?

If secession is to be recognized, what would it lead to? Let Louisiana secede, and then, after it is accomplished, what hinders her from handing that state over to England, or any other Power, commanding as it does the mouth of the great father of waters? Has she not the same undoubted assumed by her to do, if she has a right to secede, thus damming up the great river, and excluding all the States on its borders from a market. Would the great Northwest submit to this? Could not any seceded State hand itself over to any Power it might choose, thus giving us monarchical governments of every kind.

What has North Carolina to complain of? What rights of hers have been violated? Wherein has the Government of the United States distressed her, or any other citizens? Was she burdened by taxation? Were her citizens called upon to pay a direct tax to support the Government? Were not all of her rights and institutions under the protecting flag of the United States?

My doctrines are those of WASHINGTON, MARSHALL, RANDOLPH, CLAY, GRAHAM, GILMER and DEWEREUX; doctrines on which the Government was founded.

Secession is treason. It must be put down, otherwise the Republic is gone, and we are involved in an eternal war. The Government must be maintained. We are one people, one we will remain, one we will die. Secession is eternal war. If it succeeds, republican liberties are lost forever.

What do the rebels say? What did they tell you? First they said secession would be peaceable, that the Northerners would not fight, and that foreign Powers would recognize the "Southern Confederacy," that the Democrats in the North would assist the South in securing her independence. Have any of these predictions been realized? After secession took place you were told that the Northern troops were coming South free all your slaves, confiscate all your property, devastate the land, slaughter your women and children, outrage your daughters, and so on. Has this been realized? Have not your rights and property been respected?

Outrages will, to a certain extent, be committed by the best disciplined armies in the world. It must be expected; such are the results of war. The property and rights of no people have been respected so no well in times of war, as your property and rights. And what is more, the Government holds itself in readiness to remunerate all loyal citizens for all the losses they have sustained. Could there be anything more fair? Will the Confederacy do this? What is their money worth a bushel? Not a cent.

You say your slaves are all to be emancipated. What course has the Federal Government pursued thus far in regard to your slaves? When FREMONT, HUNTER and PHELPS issued their proclamations of emancipation, did not the President revoke them all? Has he not said, over and over again, that he had no constitutional right to emancipate the slaves? Has he not adhered strictly to the Constitution and laws of the country? Does he not insist that all the States shall be protected in all their rights? What more can be asked of him, who is the President of all the States? Why then are we involved in war?

Much is said about the slaves coming into the Federal lines, and many complaints made because they are not promptly given up. Are they not in the Confederate lines, and are they not used to build fortifications and do the work of rebels, and in many instances used to man rebel guns, and fight against the Union? The Federal army can't make a business of catching negroes and delivering them up. They have come here to put down treason, and a war which the rebels inaugurated. Sufferings must be expected, losses will be incurred, you must abide by events. The South is to blame for all of the disasters which may come.

If this war continues look at the consequences, see what has already taken place, see what must follow. In Newbern there are nearly 5,000 slaves, they are here, more continue to come. Should the Federal army and the Federal army is obliged to advance into the interior, then will the consequences be upon your own heads. Then your institutions and everything you have and own will necessarily be in peril.

The people must move. Call your meetings in every county. Let your convention know your wishes. Let trade be opened, let the blockade be withdrawn. Come and be restored to the inestimable privileges of American citizens.

Any man who will take up arms against such a Government as this, ought to lose his property. I am indignant at such men, and cannot refrain from expressing my feelings.

Much has been said about the negro schools in Newbern. When I came I found them there established by Mr. COZZENS. He came to me and asked my opinion. I gave it to him, and told him that I thought it was injudicious at this time—that it would look as though I intended to disregard the laws of the State, which would destroy all my influence and make me a very unwelcome visitor to the people of North Carolina. I treated the gentleman kindly, made no threats to him, nor did I give him advice or instructions. I have been misrepresented in the whole matter, which has unnecessarily engendered a bad feeling.

Mr. LINCOLN is no Abolitionist. He is the best friend the South has got. Look at his proclamation to HUNTER. It is full of meaning. If you will not take these things into your own hands you must abide by the consequences. Your ports and Custom-houses can be opened in less than thirty days.

I am here for your benefit, to get you out of a bad scrape, and bring you back to your allegiance.

Tell your leaders what I say. Go and tell the people what I have said. If this war lasts, what is to be done? what will be your condition? I can't say how long I can remain with you, or how long it will be in my power to avert the approaching dangers. My interest calls me away; my affections and hope of doing good keep me here.

The Administration wants peace. The Government did not commence the war. I am no agent of Abolition Generals. When required to be such I will leave you, and return with a heavy heart. I will do nothing unbecoming a Christian gentleman and patriot.

Beaufort, glorious old Beaufort. How often I have thought of you, the home of my early friends, who have made me what I am, those scenes of my childhood. Listen to a friend and countryman, who has ever been true to you. Come under the old flag which has protected you so long and well.

The gallant champions now in arms for the Union would fight for you to-morrow if you were with us, and should you determine to be free, you have proved your courage, and are now able to use the wicked instruments of your bad leaders, many of whom deserve the halter.

I am told that I had better go back—that I can accomplish no good here, and that my coming will disappoint the extremes on both sides. I notice no such nonsense.

It would have been far more agreeable for me to come to you as a private citizen. As it is, however, there is no love lost between me and those who fled on mean boats.

I came not to insult you. I come to do good. I shall not be able to control armies forever, nor stay the uplifted hand. Unless you soon show a disposition to accept of honorable terms, the war will go on, and the army will be forced to march inward.

Why did Mr. LINCOLN send me? I did not vote for him. He knew that I was born among you, and would stand between you and all harm, and be able to suggest such terms as you could honorably accept. I come with the olive branch, and stand, for the time being, between you and the powerful armies of the Republic, whose onward march will sweep you under, and necessarily destroy your institutions when brought in contact with opposing forces. Soon it will be too late for you to accept of my honorable terms. Then events must be left to the harsh and cruel necessities of the justice which is vindicated by the sword.

Old friends—honored gray hairs—I come for your benefit. You who have come from the distant counties to hear me to-day and take home what I say. Your interest demands peace. You desire to be free from turmoil and battle strife. Why then will you not insist on having these troubles brought to a close? I believe you will act. From the signs of the times it is very evident that a great reaction has taken place in the hearts of the people.

If your people should refuse to act, and will still cling to secession, and are given up to your idols, I must then leave you with a sad heart.

To my country I will do my duty. And to you, my old friends, to whom I am so much attached, I will also do my duty. Can I ever forget you? The monarch may forget his crown. The bright sunbeams may forget to shine, but I never will forget friends so dear, and a people who have done so much for me.

Where is Fort Donelson, Columbus, Macon, Pulaski? Where is New-Orleans? Where are all of the rebel fortifications? Before New-Orleans fell some distinguished British subjects who had been and examined all of its fortifications, went to Washington and told the Government that New-Orleans could not be taken, that it was impregnable, and begged of the Government to desist; that the Federal troops would meet with a greater disaster and more slaughtering than did the English troops in their attempt to take the city. How was it? What are the results? New-Orleans was taken before breakfast. All hell could not prevent the Yankees from taking that city, or any other. Where is Nashville, Newbern, Roanoke Island, Corinth, and all the fortified cities and batteries on the Mississippi River. All fell into the hands of the Federal troops within a few months after they undertook the job. Well may foreign nations marvel at the power of this Government. We have accomplished in months what it would take years for foreign Powers to accomplish. Well may they tremble at our greatness.

You say that you are in want of the necessaries of life. Where is there a citizen destitute of food? Show him to me, and I will see that his wants are supplied. This I am authorized to do.

Some of you appear to have a faint hope for the Confederacy still. Wait until you hear from Richmond. Even suppose that the results are disastrous to the Union army, it would only delay the contest a little longer. The thousands upon thousands of unemployed troops now in the North, who are so anxious to share the glories awaiting the Union armies, would be called into the field at once, and finish this struggle at a blow.

We ask for peace and are willing to forget and forgive. The Government can afford to be generous, for she has vindicated her power. Listen to the voice of reason, conscience and patriotism.

The great Jehovah—the author of peace and love of concord—commands us to case shedding each other's blood. Take things into your own hands, discard political aspirants who fight for fear of punishment, and ten thousand times ten thousand shall rise up and call you blessed.

The Trip of the Great Eastern.

From Our Special Correspondent.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday Morning, June 11, 1862.

I have barely time to write a few lines by the mail leaving to-day, and will, therefore, only speak of the fine trip of the Great Eastern, just completed. I speak for, and at the request, of all the passengers, in expressing through the TIMES the desire that this magnificent vessel may take her place among the steamers plying regularly between New-York and Liverpool. There is not one of us who have come over in her, who will not desire to return by the same conveyance, in preference to any other, and most of our company have crossed the Atlantic from two to twenty-five times.

We left Sandy Hook at 11 A. M. on the 1st inst., and arrived at Bell Buoy a little before 2 o'clock this morning, which, allowing for difference in times, makes the passage nine days and eleven hours. The first three days we were constantly enveloped in fog, and during all of the next five days we encountered strong beam winds. We were, therefore, much in the trough of the sea, which produced some rolling, but not enough to cause any sea sickness on board. In fact, we have come across the Atlantic with all the comfort of a residence at a first-class hotel. During the most violent motions of the vessel, large numbers of the passengers, including many ladies, have been out promenading, taking our mile walks of four times around the deck. Under the new commander, Capt. WALTER PATON, there has been no cause of complaint, either on the score of fare or courteous treatment. Last evening, the passengers spontaneously united in an expression of their highest satisfaction, and in recommending all their friends intending to cross the ocean, to seek a roomy and comfortable passage on the Great Eastern. You will, doubtless, see a document to this effect, signed by all the passengers. The pitching and rolling of the smaller ships and steamers we have passed or met have heightened our admiration of this leviathan of the deep, and made us doubly thankful that the stormy waves of the Atlantic are so effectually bridged over. O. J.

News from Albany.

ALBANY, Tuesday, June 24.

Several bankers holding New-York State seven per cent. Comptroller's loan of $1,050,000, maturing on the 1st of July, having addressed a letter to Comptroller ROBINSON, asking that the said loan may be paid in specie, not currency. The Comptroller replies, showing the justice and propriety of paying said loan in currency. He says since the suspension of specie payments, and from the first day of January last to the first of July next, both inclusive, the State will have paid the principal and interests of its funded debt, $4,000,000, in coin or its equivalent. This is sufficient evidence of the desire and determination of those charged with the management of its financial affairs to preserve its high credit and honor unfarnished. But they are of opinion that they exercise a large liberality when they make nearly two-thirds in amounts of these payments to banks which refuse to redeem their own notes in specie.

GOV. MORGAN has assigned a separate camp to Gen. SPINOLA's Empire Brigade in East New-York, and authorized a special Commission for the examination of officers. Gov. MORGAN has readily acceded to all Gen. SPINOLA's requests looking to the speedy organization of the brigade.

The object of Gen. SPINOLA's visit here, principally, is to muster into the service the first companies of his Empire Brigade.

Hon. THOMAS G. ALVORD, Judge SUTHERLAND and other members of the Committee of the last session of the Legislature to revise the General Assessment laws are at the Delavan House, and will remain in session during the week.

The Court of Appeals.

The Grape-vine Bridge over the Chickahominy—Who Built it?

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

One of your correspondents, writing from the "Army of the Potomac," states that the "Grape-vine Bridge," or the bridge over which SUMNER's corps passed to battle on Saturday, May 31, was built by the Tammany Regiment. This is a grave error.

The bridge in question was built by the First Minnesota, Col. SULLY, and about 30 yards were built when the regiment was ordered away. The Fifth New-Hampshire Volunteers were then detailed to go on with the work, and I reported in person to Gen. SUMNER for orders, which were that the bridge must be built in two days, and that I should have all the men necessary.

We commenced work with 700 men of my regiment, and the first day finished about 20 rods. The next day, I called for more men, and received 250 of the New-York Sixty-fourth and 150 of the Irish Brigade. Accompanying this reinforcement was one barrel of whisky. By hard labor we completed the job at 5 o'clock. At that hour I galloped my horse across the bridge, which was just 76 rods long. We had to rebuild the portion made by the Minnesota Regiment, as the high water had rendered it shaky. The Tammany Regiment had nothing whatever to do with building the bridge. It is very singular that the reporters of the New-York and Philadelphia papers cannot recognize the services—the existence, even, of regiments from States other than their own. Respectfully,

EDWARD E. CROSS, Col. Fiftieth N. Y. V.

LADIES' HOME FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS, Lexington-avenue, New-York, June 23.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

A LARGE FIRE IN THE EIGHTH-AVENUE—SEVERAL DWELLINGS BURNED—LOSS ABOUT $10,000.—About 1 o'clock, yesterday morning, a fire was discovered in the cellar of the two-story frame-house, No. 637 Eighth-avenue, which building was soon consumed. From this the flames extended each way to the adjoining buildings, until all of the houses, from [No. 631 to No. 645, both inclusive, were burned to the ground. The houses were principally of wood, and owing to the combustible nature of the contents there was no staying the progress of the fire, notwithstanding the fact that a large number of firemen were early on the ground. Nos. 635, 637, and 639 were owned by GEORGE HERRICK, as a grocery store and dwelling. His loss is about $1,500. He is insured for $2,000 in the New Amsterdam Insurance Company. CATHARINE HOGAN occupied a portion of No. 635 as a millinery store. Her estimated loss is from $300 to $400. She is insured for $1,200 in the Brevoort and Brooklyn Insurance Companies. Nos. 633 and 633 were occupied by A. P. SMITH. His damage is, perhaps, $300. He is insured for $1,000 in the Brevoort Insurance Company. Buildings No. 641, 643, and 645 were owned by Alderman IRA E. ALLEN. One of the occupants of the latter building, named GEORGE MCCORD, was much damaged—to what extent could not be ascertained. He is insured in the Fireman's Insurance Company for about $5,000. Mr. N. W. GUINEBVAN occupied No. 639 as a furniture store. His damage to stock was about $800. He is insured for $1,000 in the Rutger's Insurance Company. Mr. LOUIS EADENBURGER occupied No. 641 as a confectionery store. His loss on stock and furniture will amount to $600, upon which he has no insurance. HENRY BEHRMANN occupied No. 643½. His goods were very much damaged. He has an insurance of $200. Mr. WILLIE MCCORD, of No. 645, had his stock of clothing damaged to the extent of about $300. He is insured for $1,000 in the Gerhard Insurance Company. DANIEL DEMPSEY occupied the upper part of several of the buildings. He lost considerable of his stock and furniture, upon which he has an insurance for $200 in the Rutger's Insurance Company. There are quite a number of other tradesmen, whose names we could not obtain, who suffered considerably by this fire. The second floors, of nearly all the burned buildings, were occupied by poor families who lost the most of their little property, and barely escaped with their lives, from the fact that the fire occurred at a time when all were in their beds. Owing to the efforts of the firemen, and the vigilance of the Twenty-second Precinct Police, a large amount of valuable property was saved, though some of it in a damaged condition, both from fire and water. The estimated total loss is about $10,000.

FRENCH SOCIALIST BANQUET.—The French Socialist Republicans of this City, assisted by a number of others of different nationalities, and having the same opinions, celebrated the fourteenth anniversary of the revolutionary struggle of June 24, 1848, at the Stouben House, last evening. The large hall of that establishment was profusely and handsomely decorated with wreaths, festoons and banners, among which a large American standard, displayed above the rostrum, was conspicuous. The Drapeau Rouge, of the Social Republic, with its emblematic triangle in the centre of its red field, with the watchwords Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité, adorned the main wall, the German Republican tri-color another, and on each of the four sides of the room was a symbolical picture or bust. WASHINGTON, the Goddess of Liberty, etc., took the first rank. Several large tables were crowded with persons, male and female, of several nations, the "fiery Gaul" predominating, and these quietly sipped their wine or bier during the proceedings. M. ROLLS presided, assisted by M. DESBUCH as Secretary. Earnest and eloquent addresses, appropriate to the occasion, were made in the French language, by Messrs. RENELOT, MARTHOLLET, SUROT, FEDRI, LUCERNES and others, and toasts to "The Universal Republic." "Liberty for All," the "Revolution," etc., etc., were vehemently applauded. Some two hundred persons were present, and the festivities continued until a late hour.

STATEN ISLAND MATTERS.—GEO. LAW, who recently purchased the ferry running from this City in connection with the Staten Island Railroad, and discontinued the direct rout to Vanderbilt's Landing, has been induced by the representations of the people of the Island who were discommoded by the change, to promise to resume the trips from the Battery direct to Vanderbilt's Landing—making two or three in the morning and two or three in the afternoon. The remaining trips will touch at the other landings as heretofore.... Five prisoners, one of whom was charged with arson and the others with pocket-picking, escaped from the Richmond County Jail on Monday evening. While the Sheriff and Jailer were quelling a disturbance in another part of the jail, the prisoners rushed out of their cells, pushed the officers into one of the cells, turned the key on them, and then decamped.

MEETING OF DISCHARGED SOLDIERS—THE $100 BOUNTY.—A meeting of soldiers who have been honorably discharged from the service was held last evening at Harmony Gardens, Essex-street. The object of the meeting was to draw up a petition to Congress, praying for the payment of the $100 bounty promised by the Government on enlistment. Mr. SEAGRIST, a lawyer of this City, has promised to take charge of the matter for the men without compensation. Three meetings, including the one last night, have been held, and a Committee of Arrangements appointed. About four hundred signatures have been procured; to-day the petition will be forwarded to Washington, and will at once be laid before Congress, for the purpose of inducing it to make an appropriation before adjourning.

CHILDREN FOR NEW HOMES.—A company of over sixty children, brought together by the Children's Aid Society, left New-York yesterday afternoon, under the care of Mr. H. FRIEDGEN, for new homes in the West. They are provided with a good outfit, and the little orphans and homeless ones looked very bright and happy. A group of five friendless and unemployed girls who had a temporary home at the Girls' Lodging-house in Canal-street, accompanied Mr. FRIEDGEN. The features of these latter were vivid with the emotion of brightened prospects. Of the other children many were orphans or half orphans, and some had parents who thought it best to secure a good provision in the West for their children.

THE TAMMANY SOCIETY—MEETING OF SACHEMS.—On Monday evening a full meeting of Sachems took place at Tammany Hall. The object was to make suitable arrangements for the celebration of the Fourth of July, and to do this the following Committees were appointed: General Committee of Arrangements—Sachems Daniel E. Delevan, Douglas Taylor and James B. Nicholson. Sub-Committee on Orator and Toasts—Grand Sachem Nelson J. Waterbury and Sachems Vandewater, Connolly and E. F. Purdy. Sub-Committee on Finance—Sachems Douglas Taylor, Thomas Dunlop, and Isaac Bell. On Monday next the various Committees will report, and the programme for the celebration of the Fourth will be adopted.

A CAMP FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS.—The ladies connected with the hospital for wounded soldiers, in Lexington-avenue, have established a camp on an elevated ledge opposite the hospital for the accommodation of the convalescent soldiers. It was to have been occupied yesterday, for the first time, but the rain prevented. There are three large tents in the camp, which are well floored and ventilated, and arranged so that no water can collect around them. It is thought the soldiers will be more comfortable during the hot weather in a camp of this description than in the more confined apartments of the hospital. The hospital contains, at present, 200 patients, and nearly 100 have so far recovered as to be sent home.

SWINDLING THE GOVERNMENT.—SAMUEL F. HUFFMANN, alias JAMIESON, was arrested yesterday, by Officer HART, charged with obtaining $20 from Capt. JAS. J. DYKE, a Government recruiting officer at No. 597 Broadway, under false pretenses. HUFFMANN represented that he had eighteen recruits in the interior, and obtained the money to defray their traveling expenses to this City. He is said to have swindled another recruiting officer out of a number of free tickets under the same false pretenses. He was taken to the Marshal's office, and committed to the Tombs to await examination.

THE VAN NORMAN YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.—The closing exercises for the academic year of this well-known school took place at the rooms of the Institution, Nos. 3 and 5 West Thirty-eighth-street, yesterday, in presence of a large number of the parents and friends of the pupils. Eleven young ladies were graduated, after acquitting themselves creditably in the various exercises set apart for the occasion. The average number of pupils in attendance during the past year has been about one hundred.

FUNERAL OF QUARTERMASTER STEVENS.—The obsequies of Quartermaster HENRY L. STEVENS, of the Ninth Regiment N. Y. S. M., who died in this City on Saturday last, took place yesterday. The ceremonies took place at 2 P. M., at No. 24 East Twelfth-street, corner of University-place, and were attended, in spite of the inclement weather, by many relatives and friends, including members of the City Guard and the regiment of which the deceased was a member. The remains were taken to Greenwood Cemetery for interment.

THE MONSTERS AT BARNUM'S.—Indeed the beautiful weather of yesterday was a God-send to all who visited Barnum's Museum. Had it been warmer, there is little doubt but that the extremely fat man and woman, whose immensity of adipose is absolutely astounding, would have melted into thin "grease." The crowd to see them was scarcely less than that which gazed at the babies.

FUNERAL OF LIEUT. MCINTYRE.—Yesterday afternoon the funeral of Lieut. WILLIAM MCINTYRE took place from the Baptist Church in Stanton-street, at 2 o'clock. Deceased belonged to Company C, Sixty-first Regiment N. Y. S. V., and fell at the battle of Fair Oaks. A large number of persons, friends of the late Lieutenant, escorted the remains to Greenwood, where they were interred.

PARDONED.—JAMES LAWSON, alias John Lesado, convicted at the March Term (1858) of the United States District Court of passing counterfeit money, and who has served out more than half his term, seven years, was yesterday pardoned by President LINCOLN, the Spanish Minister having interceded in his behalf.

THE PARK BARRACKS HOSPITAL—CLOTHING WANTED.—The Ladies' Relief Association appeal to the public for second-hand clothing for the use of soldiers arriving at the Park Barracks, large numbers of whom are almost entirely destitute.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

THE STRAWBERRY CARNIVAL.—The strawberry carnival was at its height last week, and would have continued through the present, weather permitting. At no time within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, has the delicious strawberry been so abundant or so cheap as during the present season. The number of distinct varieties, too, is remarkable, and all have, as a general rule, reached the market in good condition. Of course, this being the fact, all classes have had their fill of the fruit, and it has been for ten days past one continuous strawberry carnival. People not satisfied with eating a quart each at home for supper must needs spend their spare change to visit some public entertainment in the evening, where the chief edible presented to tempt the appetite, would be the inevitable strawberry, the dishes dressed off with a little cream and a piece of cake. Strawberries here, strawberries there, strawberries everywhere. Festivals to do homage to strawberries, were given in the churches, festivals were inaugurated at the Academy of Music; festivals were interpolated into the school exercises, and even the eleemosynary establishments have not escaped the deluging shower of strawberries and cream. The butchers looked on in despair, while their meats were spoiling on the hooks for the want of purchasers. There was nobody to eat, nobody to buy meat. It was all strawberry—strawberries in the mouth, strawberries in the eye, strawberries in the ear, strawberries to the smell, touch and to handle. Strawberries were uppermost in the mind upon retiring to rest and the first thought that shot through the brain at the dawn of day. Some people had laid themselves out extensively to continue the carnival, but the rain has set in, fortunately, so as to give the people a breathing spell. By many this is considered a providential interposition.

THE FORT GREENE-PLACE SHOOTING CASE.—Coroner NORRIS held an inquest, yesterday, on the body of WM. O. JAUNCEY, at No. 72 Fort Greene-place, the boy who was accidentally shot, on Monday night, by a companion, while playing with a pistol. The following testimony was taken:

Arthur W. Ostrom sworn.—I reside at No. 72 Fort Greene-place; at a little before 3 o'clock, yesterday afternoon, I was sitting at the back part of our house, and heard the report of a pistol, after which I heard a scream, and recognized the voice of my brother John; went up stairs, and saw my brother clinging to his grandmother; she asked me to call grandfather; saw the body of Jauncey on the floor, and moved it out of the blood; he was breathing, but did not speak; my brother John is ten years old; deceased and my brother were constant companions and schoolmates; the pistol used belonged to me; I purchased it last year, to use on the Fourth of July; took it into the country a month ago, and loaded it there; intended to have fired it off upon returning to the city, but did not, because it was contrary to law; it was kept in a tin box on a washstand in my bedroom; knew that the pistol was loaded, but apprehended no danger; never knew of any ill feeling to exist between the deceased and my brother.

James Stuart, M. D., sworn: Was called to see deceased about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon; found him lying upon the floor, the blood oozing from a wound on the left side of the head, just above and forward of the ear; the wound was made by a bullet; deceased lived but a short time; the skull was fractured on right and left side, showing that the bullet passed through the brain; the boy died from injuries to the brain, produced by the pistol-shot.

The jury rendered the following verdict: "That the said WM. O. JAUNCEY came to his death by injuries to the brain, caused by a bullet accidentally fired from a pistol in the hands of a lad named JOHN OSTROM, but the jury desire to express their decided censure of the practice of suffering firearms to remain where children can get them to use at will."

THE SOLDIERS' HOSPITAL COMMITTEE.—The Soldiers' Hospital Committee held a meeting on Monday night, when the report of a Sub-Committee, in favor of accepting the building offered by Messrs. WALL'S SONS as a hospital, was adopted. A communication was read from the State Adjutant-General and State Commissary-General, placing the State Armory in this city at the disposal of the Committee for hospital purposes, as soon as it is put in proper repair. A model of barracks was exhibited, which would accommodate 400 patients, and cost $10,000. The Committee adjourned, to meet at the call of the Chair.

THE CASE OF CORONER MURPHY.—The testimony in the case of Coroner MURPHY is dragging its slow length along before a Committee of the Board of Supervisors. Quite a number of witnesses have thus far been examined, and the general tenor of the testimony is that the Coroner conducted the affairs of his office in a very loose manner, to say nothing more. Whether he has actually violated any statute law, remains for the Board of Supervisors to determine. The Committee will meet again this afternoon to hear additional testimony.

FATAL RESULT OF AN ACCIDENT.—L. M. DUNBACH, seriously injured a few days since by the explosion of gun-cotton in a factory at the foot of North Twelfth-street, died yesterday from the injuries then received. The deceased was 30 years old, a native of Philadelphia and a single man.

NARROW ESCAPE.—At about 5 o'clock, last evening, a child of PATRICK COGGIN, residing in Bolivar-street, only two years old, fell from a third-story window to the sidewalk, striking upon its hands and face, and, strange to say, without receiving serious injuries.

THE LATE FIRE IN BALTIC-STREET.—It is now estimated that the loss, by the destruction of OSBORN's steam-planing mill, by fire on Monday night, is nearly, if not quite, $50,000. There was only $3000 insurance upon the place.

DESTRUCTION OF OYSTERS.—It is estimated that $100,000 worth of oysters were destroyed last Fall in the bays on the south side of Long Island, by the shell-fish known as the "sea stars."

CITY COURT—Calendar for this Day.—Nos. 36, 8, 6, 20, 10, 18, 22, 44.

MOUNT PLEASANT ACADEMY.—We understand that Gen. ROBERT ANDERSON, the hero of Fort Sumter, will review the cadets of this distinguished Institution on their camp ground, at Sing Sing, to-morrow afternoon at five o'clock. These are the young soldiers who were so handsomely received in the City last year, whom Mayor WOOD reviewed in front of the City Hall, and whose performances elicited so much commendation.

Measles are prostrating the volunteers by hundreds; the hospitals are crowded with them. Soldiers, be warned in time. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are positively infallible in the cure of this disease; occasional doses of them will preserve the health even under the greatest exposures. Only 25 cents per box.
